14. Vessels shall be allowed to make fast in single line along the canal banks in such manner as may be directed by the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer from time to time, and no boat shall be made fast to or be placed outside of boats so secured. No boat or raft shall be placed in such a position as to endanger the safety or obstruct the passage of other boats. Every vessel, when stationary, shall be securely fastened, and shall at all times have some person in attendance on board. Every vessel in motion shall have a sufficient crew.

15. Vessels passing through the canals shall keep in separate lines, empty boats keeping close to the bank, and those that are laden in the centre.

16. In portions of the canals where only one towing-path, exists, vessels shall moor on the side opposite to the towing-path, and the towing-path side shall always be kept clear.

17. Iron-built cargo-boats, with outside angle iron projecting beyond the wooden fenders, will not be allowed to enter the locks unless permanent fenders are fixed over the edges of the angle iron so as to prevent them from causing damage to the locks.

18. No fire, or open, unprotected light of any description shall be used on boats containing petroleum, jute, hay or straw in any place prohibited by the Navigation Canal Officer or Supervisor, and no fire, or open, or unprotected light (except in the case of steamers, the galley and engine room fires and the electric light) shall be used on any vessel while in a lock basin.

19. No person shall wilfully or negligently allow a vessel to sink in the canals.

20. In every case of a sunken vessel, whether due to negligence or otherwise, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall offer every assistance in removing the same.

If in three days after the occurrence of a wreck it is seen that prompt measures are not being taken by the owner to remove the sunken vessel from the line of navigation, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall make their own arrangements for the removal of the same at the expense of the owner, provided that, in cases where navigation is seriously obstructed, arrangements may be made at once to remove the wreck.

21. When a sunken vessel has been recovered, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall cause notices to be posted at the locks, toll offices or other prominent places calling on those concerned to pay to the Collector of Tolls all toll or demurrage which may be due, as well as the expenses incurred in the recovery of the vessel and cargo. Should the sum due be not paid within fifteen days of the date of notice, the vessel and its furniture, or so much of it as may be necessary for the recovery of the dues, will be sold under the procedure directed in section 9 of the Canals Act, 1864.

22. The purchaser of a vessel sold under the provisions of section 9 of the said Act shall have the right to take it out of the canal on the day of purchase, or within such time as may be allowed by the Collector of Tolls, without payment of tolls.

23. When any laden vessel which has sunk has been recovered, or when any ladden vessel has been seized under the provisions of the said Act or of these rules, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall give immediate notice of the recovery or seizure to the owner of the cargo or his agent, requiring the removal of the cargo without delay and informing him that he will be required to pay all expenses necessary for the proper custody and storage of the cargo until removed.

24. If the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer be unable to ascertain the name and place of business or the abode of the owner of the cargo of such vessel, the notice prescribed in rule 21 shall be effected by a notice exhibited in his office and by advertisement in at least one English and one vernacular Calcutta newspaper as well as a local newspaper.

25. No steam-vessel, whose length exceeds thirty feet, shall ply in the Magra Hât channels except in the following:—Diamond Harbour Creek, Usti Nainan outfall, Nazra khal, Sangrampur khal up to Sangrampur bridge, and the Surjipur outer khal up to the Surjipur bridge.

26. Lights and signals.—Every vessel, whether travelling or moored in the Magra Hât channels, must, between sunset and sunrise, carry a white light in a lantern on her forepart where it can be distinctly seen from all sides. All steam-vessels in motion shall carry the lights prescribed by the Board of Trade Regulations. Barges or boats attached to a steam-vessel, whether in motion or moored, shall carry the light prescribed above.

27. Speed of vessels.—Every vessel plying in the Magra Hât channels must, between sunset and sunrise, limit her speed to three miles per hour. No steam-vessels shall ply between sunset and sunrise in channels detailed in rule 25.

28. No vessel shall remain in the outer entrance channels of the locks at Diamond Harbour and Uttarbhag nor in the inner lock channel and diversion channel of the Diamond Harbour lock and sluice, nor in the approach channels to any sluice. A board will be put up limiting the portion of the channels in which boats are not permitted to moor.

29. The places at which boats cannot be loaded or unloaded will be fixed by the Superintending Engineer, South-Western Circle, and will be demarcated with suitable posts and notice boards.

30. For any contravention of rules 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 26, 27 and 28 and rule 9, Appendix A, the person in charge of the vessel or other person in fault shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 for any one infringement, or Rs. 5 a day for any continuing infringement.

31. The channels may be closed, whenever necessary, for effecting the necessary repairs to them on one month's notice of the intention so to close them being given; but, in the event of any sudden emergency, the channels may be closed at any time without prior notice, and no claim in such cases by owners of vessels or others for compensation on account of detention or otherwise shall be entertained.

32. The term "Navigation Canal Officer," as used in these rules, shall include all persons appointed to collect tolls under section 8 of the Canals

Act. 1864, and all Public Works officers or subordinates in charge of the channel, not below the grade of Sub-Overseer.

33. No vessel whose beam exceeds 19 feet will be permitted to enter the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock. The same prohibition will apply in the case of the Uttarbhag lock to all vessels exceeding 14 feet beam.

34. Any vessel which enters the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock for the purpose of taking refuge during stormy weather will be charged a nominal toll of annas 8 per boat, provided that the vessel leaves the channel again as soon as the weather conditions permit, and does not load or unload cargo inside the channels. All vessels seeking refuge under this rule must anchor in the creek between the Railway Station and the Toll Collector's office and will not be permitted to proceed up the creek without paying the usual tolls.

35. Any vessel entering the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock and proceeding to load or unload at the Diamond Harbour Railway station only will be charged tollage at the rate of annas 2 per 100 maunds to include the return journey. Five days' time will be allowed to such boats for the complete trip in and out of the lock. Should such boats proceed up the creek, they will be charged the ordinary tolls.

The Toll Collector, Diamond Harbour, will issue a ticket when the boat enters the creek from the lock and will collect the same when the boat leaves the creek for the lock: if the quantity of cargo carried on exit exceeds that on entry he will charge tollage at the above rate on the excess amount only.

26. The Superintending Engineer, South-Western Circle, may fix places where boats may remain for loading and unloading cargo without payment of demurrage.

27. Tolls will generally be levied at fixed toll-stations, but the Supervisor of the Canals may grant licenses anywhere within the canals, provided he is personally present.

APPENDIX A.

Rules for licensing and registration of saltees or vessels under class I.

1. As provided for under rule 3, no vessel coming under class 1, rule 2, shall ply, whether regularly or only occasionally in, or partly within and partly without the limits of, the Magra Hât channels unless licensed and registered by the Collector of Tolls of the Magra Hât channels or exempted from such registration.

2. Every owner of a vessel or his agent or manjhi shall present his boat to the Collector of Tolls, Magra Hât channels, for licensing and registration giving the owner's name and residence or those of his agent duly authorized to act for him.

3. Every license granted under these rules shall continue in force for either three, six or twelve months from the date of issue.

4. The license is not transferable, and if the owner or manjhi or both of the vessel be changed, notice of the transfer must be given to the Collector of Tolls, the Magra Hât channels, who will endorse the change of ownership on the certificate and register free of charge.

5. The license certificate granted for a vessel shall contain the registered number of the vessel, owner's name and residence, name of manjhi, the maundage measurements, amount of compounded tollage and the dates of issue and expiry and shall be kept on board. It shall be produced, when required by a Navigation Canal Officer, and shall be delivered up on the expiration of the license.

6. The charge for the issue of a duplicate license to vessels in lieu of those defaced or lost shall be Re. 1.

7. The registered number of every licensed vessel shall be engraved, or branded, as well as painted in figures easily discernible on both sides of the vessel for which a charge of Re. 1 will be made. These figures shall be legibly maintained during the period of the license.

8. On the expiration of the license, the manjhi shall deliver up his ticket to the Toll Collector at the station from which it was issued.

9. No person in charge of any licensed vessel plying within the limits of the Magra Hât channels shall use or have any ticket resembling those granted under the authority of these rules.

10 Every renewal of a license shall, unless the Navigation Canal Officer considers it unnecessary, involve the issue of a fresh license certificate without alteration in the registered number of the vessel.

11. Every vessel under class I, found plying in the channels without being licensed and registered, shall be charged a demurrage rate of Rs. 3 for every such offence, provided that such vessel is not proceeding to the nearest toll-station for the purpose of obtaining a license and being registered. The fine of Rs. 3 shall be in addition to the usual charge for licensing.

The 22nd February 1916.

No. 4.—Notification.—The following draft of rules which, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), and in supersession of Notification No. 108, dated the 26th February 1884 (published at pages 399-400 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 27th idem), as amended by Notification No. 11, dated the 16th November 1908, the Governor in Council intends to make for carrying out the provisions of the said Act, is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 25th March 1916, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Draft Rules.

1. All estimates for works or repairs or for maintenance of public embankments which are prepared under section 7 or section 47 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), shall include the estimated cost of all petty establishment employed for watching or guarding embankments and for working sluices.

2. (1) Such estimates shall also include such charges for directing and supervising establishment and for the use of tools and plant as may be directed by the Governor in Council from time to time.

(2) The said charges shall not exceed in all 26 per cent. on the estimated outlay on the works or repairs, exclusive of charges for the acquisition of land or for petty establishment. The charge for supervising establishment and tools and plant shall ordinarily be a consolidated one of 10 per cent. on the outlay on the works (excluding land and petty establishment), but if in any particular case it is desired to make a higher charge or to reduce or remit the charge altogether, a reference must be made to Government at the time when the estimate is prepared.

3. The Collector shall, previous to submitting a report to the Commissioner under section 11, 19 or 43 of the Act, obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Engineer, which shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

No notices regarding new works, the estimated cost of which exceeds Rs. 2,500, shall be published under section 9 of the Act, until the estimates, specifications and plans have received the approval of the Chief Engineer.

4. No estimate referred to in section 49 of the Act shall be transmitted to the Collector, until it has been countersigned by the Superintending Engineer, who shall be responsible that the repairs proposed to be executed are necessary, that it is proposed to execute them in the proper manner and that the rates entered in the estimate are fair and reasonable.

5. The Superintending Engineer shall, on the requisition of the Collector, furnish a written opinion on any work which it is proposed to execute under the Act, causing all necessary surveys to be made.

6. Where the Collector, under the last preceding rule, requires surveys to be made, he shall either cause the estimated cost of the same to be paid to the Engineer, or procure sanction, under the ordinary rules for the disbursement of public money, to the proposed expenditure. Such deposit or sanction shall provide for the salaries and allowances of the Engineers and Surveyors intended to be employed.

7. The Superintending Engineer shall, in any enquiry under section 51 of the Act, on receiving a requisition to that effect from the Collector, give his written opinion as to the boundaries of the lands affected by such works or repairs, and the extent to which they have been benefited or affected. This opinion shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

8. Notwithstanding that there is no express mention in section 52 of the Act of objections preferred before the Collector to the Engineer's accounts and certificate of expenses, on the ground that certain lands are not benefited by the works or repairs as specified in such certificate, the Collector shall entertain and consider such objections. As the disposal of such objections will often depend on professional enquiries, the Collector shall ordinarily consult the Engineer and, if necessary, the Superintending Engineer, before passing orders, and the substance of the reference to the Engineer, and of his reply shall form part of the record.

If, on such objection the Collector shall come to the conclusion that any alteration should be made in the certificate which has been signed by the Engineer, under section 51, he may at any time, before making an order charging or apportioning the amount under section 58 of the Act, make such alteration as provided in section 52.

9. When it appears likely that the ordinary procedure under the Act would be attended with grave and imminent danger to life and property, and proceedings are taken by the Collector, under section 25 of the Act, or by the Engineer, under section 29, the Collector shall make an immediate report to the Commissioner, and forward a copy thereof to the Superintending Engineer. In such cases the Commissioner shall lose no time in submitting a copy of the said report, with his opinion thereon, for the orders of Government,

10. All orders passed under section 31 of the Act shall be in writing, and the applicant shall be entitled to receive a copy of the same, free of charge, on application. The Engineer shall delegate to all Public Works Subdivisional Officers the power of receiving applications, under section 31 of the Act, for temporary roadways and temporary water-courses, but no person so appointed shall pass an order for the construction of a temporary water-course, unless he has been specially authorised to do so by the Superintending Engineer. Such authority shall specify the embankments in regard to which only this power is to be exercised. In all cases where an application for a temporary water-course is made to a person appointed by the Engineer, such application shall be submitted to the Engineer for transmission to the Collector. The Engineer, in forwarding applications under this section to the Collector, shall state in writing whether, in his opinion, they can be sanctioned without endangering the safety of the embankment.

11. All Public Works Subdivisional Officers shall be authorised to open or shut sluices under general rules to be issued by the Engineer, with the approval of the Collector. A copy of all rules made under this section shall be transmitted to the Superintending Engineer.

12. Any order to remove an embankment or obstruction, or to repair damage, passed under section 79 of the Act, shall be appealable to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies from the decision of the Magistrate who passes the order.

13. The Engineer shall submit to Government, through the Superintending Engineer, an annual report on the state of each Schedule D embankment in his charge on the 1st of April of each year. The report shall contain the following particulars:—

(a) the original length of the embankment;
(b) the length as maintained during the year;
(c) the area it protects:
(d) the floods during the year;
(e) how the embankment was affected by the floods of the year;
(f) the cost of its upkeep;
(g) whether there has been any encroachment on embankment land during the year; if in the affirmative, what steps have been taken to bring the offender to justice;
(h) if the crest of the embankment is sufficiently high to protect the lands within from floods in the river.

14. The Engineer in charge shall submit to Government annually, through the Superintending Engineer, a report with plans shewing what embankments, if any, have been erected or added to within any tract included in a prohibitory notification issued under section 6 of the Act.

1st.—The purchasers will have no power to make any excavations on the land nearer than fifteen feet from the railway boundary, or to plough the land nearer than three feet from the same.

2nd.—If the amount of purchase-money does not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount must be paid down at once

3rd.—If the amount of purchase-money exceed Rs. 100, one fourth of the amount must be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale shall be cancelled, the sum deposited being forfeited to Government, and the lot again put up for sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

4th.—The plots of land will be sold revenue-free to the highest bidders subject to upset prices.

5th.—The sale will become final on receipt by the Collector of the orders of the Commissioner confirming it, and a regular conveyance will then be granted to the purchaser.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt: and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

MONTHLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT OF BENGAL FOR JANUARY 1916.

I. Character of the season.—During the month under review light showers fell in most of the districts of Eastern Bengal and a few districts of Western Bengal. The fall was defective everywhere excepting in Howrah and Jalpaiguri. The usual rainfall statement is appended.

II. Progress of agricultural operations.—The harvesting of winter rice was practically over and that of potatoes and rabi cereals was in progress. Cutting and pressing of sugarcane and transplantation of boro rice were also proceeding. Lands were being prepared for the next autumn crops.

III. State of standing crops.—The state of the standing spring crops was on the whole fairly satisfactory. Want of sufficient moisture in the fields, however, somewhat retarded their growth.

IV. Prospects and probable outturn.—The prospects of tobacco, mustard and other oilseeds were fairly good; but those of wheat were less promising.

V. Damage to standing crops.—No damage to standing crops was reported during the month.

VI. Condition of agricultural stock.—The condition of agricultural stock was fairly good. The number of districts from which cattle-disease was reported varied from two to four.

VII. Failure of pasturage and fodder.—There was no scarcity of fodder anywhere.

VIII. Prices of food-grains.—During the second fortnight of the month under review the price of common rice rose in four districts, fell in eleven and remained stationary in the rest. It varied from six seers twelve chittacks a rupee at Sirajganj to eleven seers eight chittacks at Contai.

IX. Condition of agricultural people.—The condition of agricultural people was fair excepting in Bankura and in parts of Dacca and Tippera districts. Relief measures were continued.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 21st February 1916.

Summary.—During the week under review light scattered showers fell in many places throughout the province. The fall has to some extent improved agricultural prospects; but more rain is needed. Reaping and pressing of sugarcane are nearing completion. Harvesting of potatoes continues, and that of mustard and other spring oilseeds has commenced. Mango blossoms have come out fully. The prospects so far are hopeful. Fodder is getting scarce in Bankura and Noakhali. Cattle-disease is reported from seven districts. The average price of common rice for the province has very slightly risen as compared with that of the previous week.

The 22nd February 1916.

No. 4.—Notification.—The following draft of rules which, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), and in supersession of Notification No. 108, dated the 26th February 1884 (published at pages 399-400 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 27th idem), as amended by Notification No. 11, dated the 16th November 1908, the Governor in Council intends to make for carrying out the provisions of the said Act, is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 25th March 1916, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Draft Rules.

1. All estimates for works or repairs or for maintenance of public embankments which are prepared under section 7 or section 47 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), shall include the estimated cost of all petty establishment employed for watching or guarding embankments and for working sluices.

2. (1) Such estimates shall also include such charges for directing and supervising establishment and for the use of tools and plant as may be directed by the Governor in Council from time to time.

(2) The said charges shall not exceed in all 26 per cent. on the estimated outlay on the works or repairs, exclusive of charges for the acquisition of land or for petty establishment. The charge for supervising establishment and tools and plant shall ordinarily be a consolidated one of 10 per cent. on the outlay on the works (excluding land and petty establishment), but if in any particular case it is desired to make a higher charge or to reduce or remit the charge altogether, a reference must be made to Government at the time when the estimate is prepared.

3. The Collector shall, previous to submitting a report to the Commissioner under section 11, 19 or 43 of the Act, obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Engineer, which shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

No notices regarding new works, the estimated cost of which exceeds Rs. 2,500, shall be published under section 9 of the Act, until the estimates, specifications and plans have received the approval of the Chief Engineer.

4. No estimate referred to in section 49 of the Act shall be transmitted to the Collector, until it has been countersigned by the Superintending Engineer, who shall be responsible that the repairs proposed to be executed are necessary, that it is proposed to execute them in the proper manner and that the rates entered in the estimate are fair and reasonable.

5. The Superintending Engineer shall, on the requisition of the Collector, furnish a written opinion on any work which it is proposed to execute under the Act, causing all necessary surveys to be made.

6. Where the Collector, under the last preceding rule, requires surveys to be made, he shall either cause the estimated cost of the same to be paid to the Engineer, or procure sanction, under the ordinary rules for the disbursement of public money, to the proposed expenditure. Such deposit or sanction shall provide for the salaries and allowances of the Engineers and Surveyors intended to be employed.

7. The Superintending Engineer shall, in any enquiry under section 51 of the Act, on receiving a requisition to that effect from the Collector, give his written opinion as to the boundaries of the lands affected by such works or repairs, and the extent to which they have been benefited or affected. This opinion shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

8. Notwithstanding that there is no express mention in section 52 of the Act of objections preferred before the Collector to the Engineer's accounts and certificate of expenses, on the ground that certain lands are not benefited by the works or repairs as specified in such certificate, the Collector shall entertain and consider such objections. As the disposal of such objections will often depend on professional enquiries, the Collector shall ordinarily consult the Engineer and, if necessary, the Superintending Engineer, before passing orders, and the substance of the reference to the Engineer, and of his reply shall form part of the record.

If, on such objection the Collector shall come to the conclusion that any alteration should be made in the certificate which has been signed by the Engineer, under section 51, he may at any time, before making an order charging or apportioning the amount under section 58 of the Act, make such alteration as provided in section 52.

9. When it appears likely that the ordinary procedure under the Act would be attended with grave and imminent danger to life and property, and proceedings are taken by the Collector, under section 25 of the Act, or by the Engineer, under section 29, the Collector shall make an immediate report to the Commissioner, and forward a copy thereof to the Superintending Engineer. In such cases the Commissioner shall lose no time in submitting a copy of the said report, with his opinion thereon, for the orders of Government.

10. All orders passed under section 31 of the Act shall be in writing, and the applicant shall be entitled to receive a copy of the same, free of charge, on application. The Engineer shall delegate to all Public Works Subdivisional Officers the power of receiving applications, under section 31 of the Act, for temporary roadways and temporary water-courses, but no person so appointed shall pass an order for the construction of a temporary water-course, unless he has been specially authorised to do so by the Superintending Engineer. Such authority shall specify the embankments in regard to which only this power is to be exercised. In all cases where an application for a temporary water-course is made to a person appointed by the Engineer, such application shall be submitted to the Engineer for transmission to the Collector. The Engineer, in forwarding applications under this section to the Collector, shall state in writing whether, in his opinion, they can be sanctioned without endangering the safety of the embankment.

11. All Public Works Subdivisional Officers shall be authorised to open or shut sluices under general rules to be issued by the Engineer, with the approval of the Collector. A copy of all rules made under this section shall be transmitted to the Superintending Engineer.

12. Any order to remove an embankment or obstruction, or to repair damage, passed under section 79 of the Act, shall be appealable to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies from the decision of the Magistrate who passes the order.

13. The Engineer shall submit to Government, through the Superintending Engineer, an annual report on the state of each Schedule D embankment in his charge on the 1st of April of each year. The report shall contain the following particulars:—

(a) the original length of the embankment;

(b) the length as maintained during the year;

(c) the area it protects;

(d) the floods during the year;

(e) how the embankment was affected by the floods of the year;

(f) the cost of its upkeep;

(g) whether there has been any encroachment on embankment land during the year; if in the affirmative, what steps have been taken to bring the offender to justice;

(h) if the crest of the embankment is sufficiently high to protect the lands within from floods in the river.

14. The Engineer in charge shall submit to Government annually, through the Superintending Engineer, a report with plans shewing what embankments, if any, have been erected or added to within any tract included in a prohibitory notification issued under section 6 of the Act.

2. The examinations will commence early in the forenoon, and will be continued until all the candidates whose names appear upon the list of the Port Officer, Calcutta or Chittagong, or of the Subdivisional Officer, Goalundo, on the day of examination are examined.

Application how to be made.

3. Candidates for examination must make their application in form Exn. 1, which must be filled in at the Port Office, Calcutta or Chittagong, or at the Subdivisional Office, Goalundo.

Candidates unable to write English must apply at the Port Office, Calcutta or Chittagong, or at the Subdivisional Office, Goalundo, for a copy of form Exn. 1, and the same must be filled in before the Port Officer, Calcutta or Chittagong, or Subdivisional Officer, Goalundo, before submission at the Port Office, Calcutta or Chittagong, or at the Subdivisional Office, Goalundo.

The form Exn. 1, properly filled in, together with the candidate's testimonials, must be lodged with the Port Officer, Calcutta or Chittagong, or Subdivisional Officer, Goalundo, not later than three days before the day of examination.

Testimonials required.

4. Applicants will be required to produce, in addition to the usual forms of discharge, satisfactory testimonials as to sobriety, experience, ability, and general good conduct for at least the last 12 months' service on boardship preceding the date of application to be examined, unless the Government after having investigated the matter, should see fit to reduce the time.

An applicant already possessed of a certificate and wishing to appear for one of a higher grade must produce his certificate and all the discharges and testimonials he submitted when he applied for examination in the lower grade as well as the discharges and testimonials necessary for the higher grade certificate. Should references of doubtful authenticity be submitted by candidates for examination, the examining officer may require proof from the candidate of their genuineness, or an affidavit made to that effect.

If applicants have served on shore immediately preceding their application, certificates of sobriety must be produced from their employers, or from a respectable householder if unemployed. No candidate will be allowed to be examined unless he has served on boardship six months within the last three years preceding the date of his application to be examined.

5. As such testimonials and discharges may have to be verified before the candidates can be examined, it is desirable that these should be handed over, together with the form Exn. 1, as early as possible.

Testimonials of Foreigners.

6. The testimonials of service of Foreigners and of British seamen serving in foreign vessels, which cannot be verified in the Port Office, Calcutta or Chittagong, or Sub-divisional Office, Goalundo, must be confirmed either by the Consul of the country to which the ship in which the candidate served belonged, or by some other recognized official authority of that country, or by the testimony of some credible person on the spot, having personal knowledge of the facts required to be established. The production, however, of such proofs will not of necessity be deemed sufficient. Each case must be decided on its own merits; and if the sufficiency of the proofs given appears to be at all doubtful, the point must be referred to the Government.

Certificate as to age.

7. Should any doubt exist as to the age of a candidate, he will be required to produce a certificate of birth or baptism.

Foreigners to know English.

8. Foreigners must prove to the satisfaction of the examiners that they can speak and write the English language sufficiently well to perform the duties required of them on board a British vessel.

9. Testimonials of service must ordinarily be based on their employers' office records.

Services claimed which cannot be 'verified from the employers' office records must be authenticated by affidavits of men under whom such services have been performed as well as by an affidavit of the candidate himself.

Testimonials of service from European engineers will be accepted.

10. Candidates will be required to account for any gaps in their services with documentary evidence.

Qualifications for Certificates of Competency as Second-class Engine-drivers of Inland Steam-vessels.

11. A candidate for a certificate of competency as second-class engine-driver of an inland steam-vessel must have attained the age of twenty-one years.

12. (a) He must have served an apprenticeship of at least four years if in India, or three years if in the United Kingdom, in the making or repairing of steam-engines and one year in the engine-room of a steamer; or

(b) He must have served four years in the engine-room of a steamer at sea, or on inland waters under a certificated engineer or first-class engine-driver, one year of which service must have been as a serang or tindal; or

(c) He must have served five years in the engine-room of a steamer, one year of which service must have been as serang, tindal or principal fireman in a vessel of not less than 15 nominal horse-power under a first-class engine-driver; or

(d) He must have served two years in charge of the engines of a factory or mill under a European manager or engineer and one year as engine-room serang, tindal or principal fireman in a steamer of not less than 15 nominal horse-power.

13. He must satisfactorily pass a viva voce examination as to the working of marine engines and boilers and the uses of the different parts and fittings, also as to the use of brine cocks, the salinometer and blowing-off the care of boilers in salt or foul water, and the art of economical stoking and prevention of smoke.

14. He must be able, if required, to show his practical qualifications by actually working the engines of a small steamer, after fulfilling all the other tests to which he will be subjected.

Qualifications for Certificates of Competency as Second-class Engine-drivers of Inland Motor-vessels.

15. A candidate for a certificate of competency as second-class engine-driver of an inland motor-vessel must have attained the age of twenty-one years.

(a) He must have served an apprenticeship of at least three years in the making or repairing of steam and motor-engines and one year in the engine-room of a motor-vessel; or

(b) He must have served three years in the engine-room of a steamer or motor-vessel, one year of which service must have been as serang or tindal in a motor-vessel; or

(c) He must have served two years in charge of the engines of a factory or mill under a European manager or engineer as well as one year as serang or tindal in the engine-room of a motor-vessel; or

(d) He must have served as engine-driver in charge of the engines of a motor-vessel during the six months preceding the 14th March 1914 and apply for examination before the 31st March 1916; or

(e) He must have served for at least six months with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels or with a certificate of a higher grade in the engine-room of a motor-vessel as serang or tindal.

16. He must satisfactorily pass a viva voce examination as to the working of different types of marine motor-engines, the uses of their parts and fittings and especially those most liable to get out of order; also as to the different oils and gases used for power purposes in internal combustion engines, the conditions under which the several kinds of oil operate, their flash point, the danger when that is low, and meaning of the term.

17. He must be able, if required, to show his practical qualifications by actually working the engines of a small motor-vessel after fulfilling all the other tests to which he will be subjected.

Qualifications for Certificates of Competency as First-class Engine-drivers of Inland Steam-vessels.

18. A candidate for a certificate of competency as first-class engine-driver of an inland steam-vessel must have attained the age of twenty-two years.

19. (a) He must have served an apprenticeship of at least four years if in India, or three years if in the United Kingdom, in the making or repairing of steam-engines, and one year as Assistant Engineer in a steamer having engines of not less than 80 nominal horse-power whilst holding a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels; or

(b) He must have served five years in the engine-room of a steamer at sea or on inland waters, two years of which service must have been as a serang or principal tindal of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 30 nominal horse-power whilst holding a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels; or

(c) He must have served one year as second driver with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels in charge of a watch on the main engines and boilers of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 30 nominal horse-power; or

(d) He must have served one year with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels as driver in charge of the engines of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 20 nominal horse-power; or

(e) He must have served eighteen months as serang or principal tindal with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels in charge of a watch on the main engines and boilers of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 30 nominal horse-power; or

(f) He must have served three years in charge of the engines of a factory or mill under a European manager or engineer, as well as two years as assistant engineer, engine-room serang or principal tindal, of a steamer having engines of not less than 80 nominal horse-power whilst holding a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels.

20. He must pass a viva voce examination similar to that required by Rule 13 for a second-class engine-driver's certificate for steam-vessels but more advanced.

21. He must also be able, if required, to show his practical qualifications by actually working the engines of a steamer after fulfilling all the other tests to which he will be subjected.

Qualifications for Certificates of Competency as First-class Engine-drivers of Inland Motor-vessels.

22. A candidate for a certificate of competency as first-class engine-driver of an inland motor-vessel must have attained the age of twenty-two years.

(a) He must have served an apprenticeship of at least three years in the making or repairing of steam and motor engines and one year as serang or principal tindal in the engine-room of a motor-vessel having engines of not less than 250 brake horse-power whilst holding a second-class engine-driver's certificate for motor-vessels; or

(b) He must have served four years in the engine-room of a steamer or motor-vessel, one year of which service must have been as serang or principal tindal in a motor-vessel having engines of not less than 250 brake horse-power whilst holding a certificate as second-class engine-driver for motor-vessels; or

(c) He must have served one year as second driver, serang or principal tindal with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for motor-vessels in charge of a watch on the main engines of a motor-vessel of not less than 250 brake horse-power; or

(d) He must have served one year with a second-class engine-driver's certificate for motor-vessels, as driver-in-charge of the engines of a motor-vessel having engines of not less than 150 brake horse-power; or

(e) He must have served three years in charge of the engines of a factory or mill under a European manager or engineer as well as one year as assistant engine-driver, engine-room serang or principal tindal of a motor-vessel having engines of not less than 250 brake horse-power, whilst holding a second-class engine-driver's certificate for motor-vessels.

23. He must pass a viva voce examination similar to that required by rule 16 for a second-class engine-driver's certificate for motor-vessels, but more advanced.

24. He must be able, if required, to show his practical qualifications by actually working the engines of a motor-vessel after fulfilling all the other tests.

Qualifications for Certificates of Competency as Engineers.

25. A candidate must be not less than twenty-two years of age.

(a) He must have served as an apprentice engineer for five years if in India, or four years if in the United Kingdom, and prove that during the period of his apprenticeship he has been employed on the making or repairing of steam-engines, boilers, etc.

Journeyman's time will be considered as equivalent to apprenticeship.

In addition to the apprenticeship described above, the applicant must have served two years thereafter as Assistant Engineer in a steamer having engines of not less than 80 nominal horse-power or with a first-class engine-driver's certificate as driver-in-charge of the engines of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 30 nominal horse-power, or Failing the above service, he must have served four years with a first-class engine-driver's certificate, in charge of the engines of a steamer having compound surface condensing engines of not less than 30 nominal horse-power.

(b) He must be able to give a satisfactory description of boilers, and the methods of staying them, together with the use and management of the different valves, cocks, pipes and connexions.

(c) He must understand how to correct defects from accident, decay, etc., and the means of repairing such defects.

(d) He must understand the use of the water-gauge, pressure gauge, barometer, thermometer and salinometer, and the principles on which they are constructed.

(e) He must state the causes, effects and usual remedies for incrustation and corrosion.

(f) He must be able to explain the method of testing and altering the setting of the slide valves, and method of testing the fairness of shafts and adjusting them.

(g) He must be able to calculate the suitable working pressure for a steam-boiler of given dimensions, and the stress, per square inch, on crank and tunnel shafts when the necessary data are furnished.

(h) He must understand the construction of, and be able to maintain in working condition, the auxiliary machinery which may be placed under his charge, viz., electric light engines (steam and oil) and dynamos, electric motors, the various types of steering engines, hydraulic and refrigerating machinery.

(i) He must understand the construction of centrifugal bucket, and plunger pumps, and the principle on which they act.

(j) He must be able to state how a temporary or permanent repair could be effected in case of derangement of a part of the machinery, or total breakdown.

(k) He must write a legible hand, and have a good knowledge of arithmetic up to and including vulgar and decimal fractions and square and cube roots. He must also understand the application of these rules to questions about safety valves, coal consumption, consumption of stores, capacities of tanks, bunkers, &c.

(l) He must be able to pass a creditable examination as to the various constructions of paddle and screw engines in general use, as to the details of the different working parts, external and internal, and the use of each part.

(m) He must possess a creditable knowledge of the prominent facts relating to combustion, heat, steam and electricity.

(n) He will be required to make an intelligible hand sketch, or a working drawing of some one or more of the principal parts of a steam-engine, and to mark in, without a copy, all the necessary dimensions in figures, so that the sketch or drawing could be worked from (Appendix D). Drawing boards and T-squares will be provided, but applicants will have to bring with them any drawing instruments they may require.

(o) He must be able to state the general proportions borne by the principal parts of the machinery to each other, and to calculate the direct stress, the torsional stress, and the bending stress in round bars, and the direct stress and the bending stress in rectangular bars with given loads.

(p) He must be able to describe different types of marine motor-engines, their working and uses of the several parts.

General Rules as to Examinations.

(Engineers.)

Candidate not to take books, etc., into examination-room

26. All books necessary for the use of candidates under examination will be provided and applicants will not be permitted to take into the examination-room any book, paper, document, or memoranda of any description whatever; and, subject to the provisions referred to hereafter, they will also not be allowed to work out their problems on a slate or on waste paper.

27. Candidates will be allowed in the time allotted to cancel any part of their work, and, when required, additional papers will be supplied by the examiners. These additional sheets must be attached to, and form part of, the examination papers.

Punishment for breaking rules

28. In the event of any candidate being discovered copying from another, or affording any assistance or giving any information to another, or communicating in any way with another during the time of examination, he will be regarded as having failed in his examination, and will be turned back for three months, in the same manner as if he had failed in the practical part of the examination; and no part of the fees he may have paid for examination will be returned to him.

Leaving examination-room

29. If a candidate leaves the room before answering any question which has been given to him, he cannot afterwards be permitted to answer it, but the examiners may substitute other data or another question.

Questions and answers

30. (a) The examination of candidates for certificates of competency as engineers consists of four parts: Arithmetic, Drawing, Elementary questions and viva voce. When the number of marks obtained in arithmetic amounts to 28, that is, two-thirds of the maximum, the candidate passes in arithmetic.

(b) All applicants presenting themselves for examination for certificates of competency as engineers will be required to give written answers to ten questions selected from the list of elementary questions shown in Appendix B. These questions are intended to furnish a record to some extent of the candidate's knowledge at the time of his examination, and also to induce the candidates to pay more attention to their handwriting and spelling.

31. The form, Appendix A, on which these answers will be written, contains also some questions as to the experience of the applicant, to be answered by him in writing.

32. Examiners may add to their viva voce questions on the practical management of steam-engines and boilers any of those contained in Appendix B.

33. If at the expiration of the time allowed the candidate has worked out correctly the whole of the questions set to him, and given satisfactory answers in the viva voce examination, he will be declared to have passed.

34. If at the expiration of the time allowed he has not worked out the whole of the questions set to him, but if the result of the viva voce examination, taken in connection with the answers to such of the questions as he has worked out, is sufficient to satisfy the examiners that the applicant is competent to take charge of engines, he will be declared to have passed.

35. In other cases he will be declared to have failed.

36. A report of the examination, and the examination papers will be forwarded to the Government on the prescribed form.

Notification of having passed will be given to successful candidates.

37. If the candidate passes, he will receive a formal note to that effect upon which the Government will issue the certificate to the candidate, whose testimonials, etc., will be returned at the same time.

Fees.

Fees to be paid by applicants for examination

38 Candidates for examination, in making their application on form Exn. 1, will be required to pay the examination fees before any step is taken, whether by inquiring into their services or testing their qualifications, etc. No part of the fee will under any circumstances be returned to them; but should it be found that their service is not sufficient to entitle them to be examined, or that their testimonials are unsatisfactory, they will be allowed to present themselves for examination without paying any further fee, when they have fulfilled the requisite service, or are able to produce satisfactory testimonials, as the case may be.

39. The fee for examination must be paid to the Port Officer, Calcutta or Chittagong, or Subdivisional Officer, Goalundo. In any case in which a candidate offers money to any other officer, and in any place but in the Port Office, Calcutta or Chittagong, or Subdivisional Office, Goalundo, the candidate so offering money will be regarded as having committed an act of misconduct, and will be rejected and not allowed to be examined for 12 months.

40. If a candidate fails in his examinations, no part of the fee he has paid will be returned to him.

41. The fees are as follows :—

	Rs.
Second-class engine-drivers ...	1
First-class ditto	10

Failure.

42. If the applicant fails in the viva voce or practical part of the examination, he may not present himself for re-examination until he can produce proofs of three months' further service afloat. If he fails in arithmetic or drawing only, he may come up again at any time. Engine-drivers may be examined de novo after six months' active service as serang or principal tindal or second driver if the past examination showed that they might reasonably be expected to qualify.

General.

43. Certificates of competency as engineers and first and second-class engine-drivers shall be made out and issued in the forms hereunto annexed.

44. Every certificate of competency shall be made in duplicate, and one copy shall be delivered to the person entitled to the certificate and the other shall be kept and recovered by the Port Officer of Calcutta or Chittagong, or the Subdivisional Officer, Goalundo.

APPENDIX A.

(See rule 31.)

To Engineer Examiners.

Examiners will require all candidates to fill up the particulars noted below, and will forward the same to the Government along with the report of the examination.

The arithmetical questions for engineers and the viva voce examinations for all candidates will be continued as heretofore, and failure in the elementary questions will be treated as failure in arithmetic.

The numbers of the questions for each examination will be selected by the examiners, and they are not to be communicated to the candidate until his examination commences.

Port	Class for which examined
Date	Candidate's name

A. Where and how long did you serve in works at the making or at the repairing of engines, and in what capacities?

B. How long have you served in the engine-room at sea, or on inland waters and in what capacities?

C. With what descriptions of engines have you served at sea, or on inland waters—paddle, or screw, or both? What size were the engines?

D. With what description of boilers have you served at sea, or on inland waters—cylindrical, multitubular, water tube, sectional or flue boilers?

E. What engine defects have come under your notice at sea, or on inland waters, what caused these defects, and how were they remedied? Give the names of the steamers for verification.

F. What boiler defects have come under your notice, what caused these defects, and how were they remedied? Give the names of the steamers for verification.

For the questions to be answered on the following pages, see the list of Elementary Questions in Appendix B. The questions need not be written: only the answers to them.

Elementary Questions.

For the examination of Engineers for Certificates of Competency.

1. What parts of an engine are generally made of wrought iron?
2. What parts of an engine are generally made of cast iron?
3. For what parts of an engine is steel sometimes used?
4. What parts of an engine are generally made of brass or gun-metal?
5. Where is "white metal" sometimes used? On account of what property possessed by it is it adopted? What objection is there to its more general use?

6. For what parts is Muntz metal sometimes used? Is it malleable? For what properties is it valued?

7. What difference is there in the composition of cast iron, of wrought iron and of steel?

8. How can cast iron, wrought iron, and steel be distinguished from each other?

9. What are the different properties of cast iron, of wrought iron and of steel?

10. What is meant by the terms "breaking stress," "proof stress," "safe working stress"?

11. What is the cohesive strength, or breaking stress, of good ordinary wrought iron?

12. Tempering steel: how is it done, and in what order do the colours come?

13. What is case-hardening?

14. Which of the common metals or alloys can be forged, and which of them are brittle or "short"?

15. What is meant by "welding"? Which of the common metals can be welded?

16. The expansion of metals by heat; give examples of this in the engine and in the boiler.

17. In the construction of steel cylindrical marine boilers, for what parts have the plates to be worked hot? What precautionary treatment of these plates is afterwards necessary?

18. In what parts of cylindrical marine boilers is the strongest rivetting employed? In which of the shell seams is it most necessary?

19. What is "caulking," and how are seams prepared for caulking?

20. Describe the different ways of fastening the ends of the main stays of a boiler. What are the merits of, or objections to, the different plans?

21. What stress per square inch is allowed on boiler stays?

22. Describe a rivetted stay, and state where such stays are commonly used.

23. Where are thin plates to be looked for in a boiler as it wears, and how is the thinness to be detected?

24. How are boiler tubes fixed? What are "stay tubes," and how are they secured?

25. Where is it generally that boiler tubes leak? How is this defect repaired? What are the causes of this leaking?

26. What are the causes of cracked tube plates? Where are the cracks situated? How are they repaired?

27. What is the difference between a "dry uptake" and a "wet uptake"? Which requires more repair? Why? Where have you seen a wet uptake?

28. What is a superheater? What is its construction? What valves are on it? There is sometimes a gauge glass on it. What is that for? Are superheaters now in general use?

29. What parts of a marine multitubular boiler are first injured by shortness of water?

30. Where are angle irons sometimes used in the construction of a boiler, and where are flanged plates used?

31. Priming; to what causes is it attributed? What means are applied to prevent it? What evils may be produced by it?

32. Funnel draught; what makes it? What checks it?

33. Flame is sometimes seen at the top of the funnel; what causes this appearance? Is it beneficial or is it detrimental? Why so?

34. A blast pipe; what is its construction? Where is it placed? For what is it used?

35. How many bottom blow-off cocks are generally fitted to each boiler, and why are they so fitted?

36. Blow-off cocks are sometimes fitted with a spanner guard; for what purpose is this? Describe how the guard is formed.

37. Water-gauge test-cocks; where are they placed? At what heights? Must the cocks themselves be at those heights? What provision is made for cleaning these cocks should they ever become choked? When there are no test-cocks, how is the height of the water ascertained?

38. What is a dead-weight safety valve? Of what are the rubbing surfaces formed? How is a lock-up valve arranged to admit of lifting it or of turning it round, and to prevent adding to the weight?

39. About what area of safety valve is now required by the Board of Trade? What is the effect of suddenly opening a safety valve when steam is up? To about what extent do safety valves rise when blowing off without being eased by hand?

40. Spring-loaded safety valves; what advantages have they that are not possessed by dead-weight valves? What are the disadvantages, if any, as compared with dead-weight valves?

41. Of what pieces does a glass water gauge mounting consist? How does it act? Where is it placed? At what height? Is it liable to derangement? How is its working tested?

42. Glass water gauges have sometimes pipe connections top and bottom; what is the object of this arrangement? Should there be cocks at the extremities of these pipes? Why? Or why not?

43. Describe a Bourdon steam gauge. Some gauges have an inverted syphon pipe below them: what is its use?

44. Why is a small cock sometimes put on the pipe leading to a steam gauge? Where should it be placed, and what error might be made by omitting to use it?

45. Do steam gauges indicate the total pressure of the steam or only a portion of that pressure? What is the pressure measured from?

46. What is meant by the salting of the boiler? How is this prevented? What is the density of ordinary sea water? How is the density ascertained? What is the difference between the formation of scale and the salting of the boiler? What is the maximum density at which boilers should be worked at sea? In the event of condenser tubes leaking, what is the minimum density at which boilers should be worked? Give your reasons.

47. Scum cocks and pipes; how are they arranged? Where are they placed? At what height in the boiler? When are they used? When must they be shut? Neglect of these cocks leads to what dangers?

48. Of what does scale consist? Where is it most objectionable? How is it removed? How is its formation prevented? What evil effects are produced by it?

49. What is a salinometer? Of what does it consist? How does it act? How it is graduated? Can it be used at any temperature indiscriminately?

50. What harm may be done through the check valve of one of a set of boilers being defective while under way? How would you work to avoid this harm?

51. How is the leak from a split tube stopped in a boiler under way? Describe the operation.

52. What is the use of dampers? Where are they fitted? When should they be used?

53. When there are no dampers fitted, what is used instead? What evil to the boiler is sometimes attributed to this? When the heating surfaces are clean does this occur?

54. Describe the piston of a steam cylinder; with its different rings and their uses. There are generally round pieces let in flush on one side of a piston: what are they? How are these pieces fixed?

55. Cylinder drain cocks; what is their use? There is sometimes a valve upon each cock; what purpose does it serve?

56. Cylinder escape valves; of what do they consist? How protected? How regulated? When are they most needed? To what danger do they expose the engineer? What precaution is sometimes used to obviate this danger?

57. What is a compound engine? What different kinds are there for screw steamers, in respect to the number and arrangement of their cranks and cylinders? What is a triple expansion engine?

58. What is link motion? What are some of its advantages? In modern engines for the screw propeller when there is no link motion, what takes its place?

59. What is a separate expansion valve? Why is it not fitted to all engines? What effect has an expansion valve upon the starting and upon the reversing of the engine?

60. What arrangement is applied to reduce the friction of a slide valve? To what is the friction due?

61. Describe a loose eccentric: how does it act? In what engines are the loose eccentrics still employed?

62. What is the travel of the eccentric rod? How it is measured on the eccentric? What is the travel of the slide valve when the link motion is in mid gear, and the engine still moving?

63. What are "double beat valves"? What objections are there to their use?

64. What is a circulating pump? Is it always worked by the main engine? Give an example from your last steamer of the three water temperatures generally noted by careful engineers.

65. An air valve is sometimes fitted to a circulating reciprocating pump; what purpose does it serve?

66. What is the difference between a bucket air-pump, a piston air-pump, and a plunger air-pump?

67. Are double-acting air-pumps made with plungers, with pistons, or with buckets? Describe the construction and action of circulating-pumps.

68. What is an air-pump trunk? When is it necessary? How is it attached to the bucket? Centrifugal pumps: describe their construction and mode of working.

69. What class of air-pump requires both foot and delivery valves, and in what other class can either of these valves be in some cases dispensed with?

70. What are marine governors? What is their general construction? How do they act?

71. With a surface condenser and a single acting air-pump what is the effect of a leaky foot valve, and what is the effect of a leaky bucket when there is also a foot valve?

72. Where is the air-pump pet cock or valve placed? How does it act? What is its object? Does it in every case reduce the effective capacity of the pump? Is it equally applicable to double acting pumps?

73. At what temperature is the hot well worked? What is the effect of higher temperatures? What is the effect of lower temperatures? What limits the lowness of temperature? Has a very low temperature any disadvantages?

74. Bilge injection with jet condensers; what are the fittings required? When is it used? What precautions are necessary in using it?

75. When surface condensers are used, what takes the place of the bilge injection? To what is the connection made? How is its valve formed? Why is this necessary?

76. What are the practical guides to the proper amount of opening of the inlet valve for the circulating pump?

77. Feed-pump pet cock or valve; where is it placed? What is its use? How does it act? Is it always a necessary fitting?

78. What are some of the ways of fastening the ends of surface condenser tubes? About what size and about what thickness are condenser tubes? What parts of a surface condenser are made of brass?

79. What is a blow-through valve or cock? To what is it attached? There is sometimes a valve which, when opened, admits steam from the slide valve casing to the exhaust port; what is its use? To which cylinder is it fitted?

80. What are snifting valves? Why are they generally omitted now?

81. What connexions are generally fitted to the donkey pump, and to what services can it be applied?

82. When the engines are stopped in harbour with steam up, what are to be shut and what are to be opened?

83. How is an engine heated up before starting? What precautionary examinations are made before starting?

84. What is an interceptor or catch-water? Where is it fixed, what is its construction, how does it act, and what attention does it require?

85. Describe an air-pump bucket with its valve or valves and its packing. Of what are the valves generally made?

86. Of what materials are air-pump rods made? Why?

87. What is the racing of the engine? When does it occur? What danger attaches to it? What is done to prevent it?

88. When under way, when the air-pump bucket is at the top of its stroke, at what height is the water in the condenser?

89. What is meant by the "pitch" of a screw propeller? How is it measured?

90. Explain the difference between a "right hand" and a "left hand" propeller, and state how each of them revolves.

91. What is the slip of a screw propeller? How is its amount expressed in figures?

92. Which of the valves about engines and boilers have to be worked by hand, which of them are self-acting, and which are worked by the motion of the engine.

93. Why is soda sometimes put into a boiler, and how is it put in when under way? What is the kind of soda used?

94. Tallow cups for cylinders were sometimes made with two small cocks, or with only one small cock, or with one large hollow plug cock or with one small cock and a valve; which of these is suitable for a high-pressure cylinder, and which for the cylinder of a condensing engine? Describe how the cup with only one small cock is used. What is now generally used instead of these? How has this change come about?

95. Does a cylinder escape valve, self-acting allow all the water to escape? If not, how much is left in the cylinder?

96. What is a "Steam Lubricator" (sometimes called an Impermeator)? Explain its action. To what part of the engine is it connected? Will throwing cold water over it make it work faster or slower? Describe the one used in your last steamer.

97. A common paddle wheel; of what is the centre made? Of what are the arms formed? What is the form of the bolts which attach the floats to the arms? How are the arms attached to the centres?

98. Why have some paddle wheels one or more cast-iron floats in each wheel? With what engines are these most required? At what part of the circumference are they placed?

99. Why are paddle wheel floats sometimes made of different breadths in the same wheel? With what description of engine is this most needed? Where are the broad floats placed and where are the narrow floats placed in the circumference of the wheel?

100. What difference is there between a radial paddle wheel and one with feathering floats? What is the object of feathering floats? Are all the eccentric rods attached in the same way, and are they all of the same form?

101. Whereabout is the centre of the eccentric of a paddle wheel with feathering floats placed? In that case are the feathering levers on the striking face or on the back of the float? When the paddle shaft has an outer bearing, how is the eccentric made?

102. Of what materials are the working surfaces of a paddle wheel with feathering floats? How are they lubricated?

103. What is a "Disconnecting Paddle Engine"? At what place is the disconnecting effected? How is it accomplished? In which of the cranks of a disconnecting engine are the crank pins fixed?

104. Is link motion valve gear or the loose eccentric generally used for disconnecting paddle engines? For what steamers are disconnecting paddle engines frequently employed?

105. What are expansion joints? Where are they necessary? What attention do they require? Of what should the working surfaces be made?

106. What omission in the construction of expansion joints may lead to a serious accident when steam is first applied? How is this prevented in the construction of a steam trunnion pipe for an oscillating engine?

107. Describe an oil cup with a syphon worsted. How is the worsted arranged? How is it cleaned? How far down the tube does it extend?

108. Describe a thrust bearing; which of the surfaces wears? Why is there sometimes a number of oil tubes or one thrust bearing?

109. What parts of a screw shaft are generally covered with brass? Why is this necessary? About what thickness is the brass?

110. What is the stern tube or screw shaft pipe? Why is a pipe of such a length required? Of what is it made? How is it fixed at each end?

111. What is a lignum vitæ bearing? How is the wood fitted? Where is such a bearing generally used?

112. How is a screw propeller fixed on the shaft? What means are used to prevent its getting loose at sea?

113. Where are sluice valves placed? What large sluice valve is there in almost all screw steamers? From what position should this valve be worked? Why so? What attention should it receive?

114. With a condensing engine what valves or cocks are on the skin of the ship in the engine-room and in the stokehold?

115. What are the necessary fittings of a marine boiler?

116. With a surface condensing engine what cocks or valves are opened some time before the engine is started so as to be ready for starting whenever the order is given?

117. What is a steam jacket? What cocks are on it? In what engines are jackets most generally used? Do they require to be felted?

118. What parts of an engine or its fittings should be felted or otherwise protected from radiation?

119. What are the small cylinders sometimes fitted on the slide valve casing cover of vertical engines? Explain their action. To what are they connected by a pipe? Why?

120. Name the principal pipes in connection with the engines and boilers of a steamer, and state to what the ends of these pipes are connected?

121. Through what cocks or valves, pipes and chambers does the water pass on its way from the sea inlet rose plate to the water space of the boiler, with a jet condenser?

122. Through what cocks or valves, pipes and chambers does the circulating water of a surface condenser pass?

123. Through what cocks or valves, pipes and chambers does the steam pass from the boiler until it is in the form of water in the hot well?

124. Name the pieces of the engine through which the pressure of the steam is transmitted from the piston to the screw propeller. Name them in the order in which they act.

125. What is an air vessel? How does it act? At what parts of an engine or of its fittings are air vessels generally applied?

126. What is the construction of a mudbox? Where should mudboxes be placed? Why are they necessary? How should the space be divided by the rose plate, and why?

127. What is a trunk engine? Why has it fallen into disuse?

128. What is an oscillating engine? For what steamers are oscillating engines generally adopted? Why? How is the steam conveyed to and from the slide valve casing?

129. Of what parts does the valve motion gear of an oscillating engine consist?

130. For what have geared engines sometimes been used? Of what were the cogs or the large wheel made?

131. At what part of a screw steamer is the pressure that propels it applied to the hull?

132. At what part of a paddle steamer is the pressure that propels it applied to the hull?

133. About how much fuel per indicated horse-power per hour is required by modern steam engines, common, compound, and triple expansion?

134. What is the explanation of the economy of the surface condenser?

135. What is the construction of a surface condenser? Of what are its tubes made? How are they fixed? How are they kept tight? What is done with a split tube?

136. Where do surface condensers foul? How are they cleaned?

137. What non-conducting substances are employed to prevent radiation, and how are they applied?

138. In the construction of smoke-box doors and of dry uptakes, what provision is made to lessen the amount of radiation?

139. How can the formation of excessive smoke be prevented? Describe smoke preventing apparatus.

140. What is meant by "circulation" in a boiler, and what are the results of defective circulation?

141. What means are sometimes adopted to improve the circulation in a boiler?

142. By what arrangement is the circulation promoted in a "hay-stack" boiler?

143. Describe a ship's side air-pump discharge valve. In what respects does it sometimes differ from a common stop-valve, and what attention does it require?

144. What is the construction of a feed escape valve, to what is its discharge connected, and how is its loading regulated? Where should the escaping water flow?

145. When there is no feed escape valve, what is the arrangement of the feed valves or cocks?

146. What is the measure of a horse-power? How is indicated horse-power ascertained?

147. Has "nominal horse-power" a fixed meaning? What is the use of this expression? What is generally taken as the measure of one horse-power nominal?

148. What is "back pressure" in a cylinder? About how much is it in each of the cylinders in your last steamer? Is excessive cushioning ever a trouble under certain conditions in modern engines? Say when and why and in which cylinder this occurs.

149. What is meant by "speed of piston"? About how much is the speed of piston in modern marine engines?

150. What is "atmospheric pressure"? What is its average amount? What instrument tells this amount?

151. What is "gross pressure" or "absolute pressure"? What pressure is it that is shown by the steam gauge?

152. What is meant by "cutting off" steam? How is it done? What part of the valve regulates the cut off?

153. What is a piston slide valve? Describe its construction. Why are they frequently employed in place of the common slide valve? Have they any disadvantages compared with a common slide valve? If so, name them.

154. What fixes the time of closing the exhaust? After the exhaust is closed and before the port opens for steam, what becoms of the steam that is in the cylinder?

155. What is the "lead" of the valve? What is its object? About that amount is it?

156. What is the "cover" or "lap" of the valve? What is its object? About what proportion of the stroke of the valve is it made?

157. What is the "exhaust cover" of a slide valve? What is its effect upon cushioning and upon exhaust?

158. What is "minus cover" or "minus lap" on the exhaust? What is its effect upon the exhaust and upon cushioning?

159. What is "cushioning" or "compression" in a steam cylinder? How is it affected by the amount of cover or of minus cover there may be upon the exhaust? How is it affected by the exhaust pressure?

160. What is "mean effective pressure"? How is its amount ascertained?

161. What is a dial vacuum gauge? What is its construction? For what is it used? About what amount should it show when the engine is working all right? What effect have the variations it indicates on the performance of the engine?

162. Does the vacuum gauge enable you to tell what pressure there is in the condenser, or must you have recourse also to the barometer to arrive at that? How would you ascertain the actual amount of back pressure there is in the condenser?

163. What is a barometer? What is its construction? Is a barometer sometimes used instead of a vacuum gauge? In what respect does the weather barometer differ from the vacuum gauge barometer?

164. The common vacuum gauge and the common steam gauge, in which of them are the graduations marked from atmospheric pressure? Does either of them tell what is the true actual pressure in the boiler or in the condenser?

165. Do steam and vacuum gauges vary with the variations of the weather barometer? When the weather barometer varies from 29 to 31 how much will the vacuum gauge vary and how will that affect the working of the engine? Why?

166. Vacuum is generally stated as so many inches. What is meant by, say, 20 inches vacuum? What does that tell us about the absolute pressure of the vapour then in the condenser?

167. From what depth will a pump draw water? Is there any limit? Why?

168. What is vacuum? Can vacuum move a piston? When the temperature of the water in the condenser is 212° Fahrenheit, what is the greatest degree of vacuum there can then be in the condenser?

169. What is a thermometer? What is its construction? What is the property of matter that is the principle of its construction? What temperatures are regularly noted by careful Engineers?

170. What is the temperature of (1) melting ice, (2) boiling water, (3) steam about 60 lbs. pressure by the steam gauge, (4) steam about 100 lbs., (5) steam about 150 lbs., (6) smoke in the funnel, (7) water in the hot well?

171. What is meant by the "conduction" of heat? Give examples of it in the boiler and in the engine.

172. What is meant by the "convection" of heat? Give examples of it in the boiler and in the engine.

173. What is meant by "radiation" of heat? Give examples of it in the boiler and in the engine.

174. Which is convection, which is radiation, and which is conduction in the following cases:—(1) Heat from the glowing fuel to the furnace crown? (2) Heat passing from one side of the furnace crown plate to the other? (3) Heat passing from the steam pipes in the engine-room? The heat of evaporation?

175. What are the effective heating surfaces of a marine boiler?

176. What parts of a marine engine are exposed to danger when the temperature is below freezing point?

177. What precautions are necessary in cold climates when the temperature is below freezing point?

178. State as many ways as you can by which a boiler might not get its full feed. A boiler, or one of a set of boilers, gets short of water although the feed valve is open its proper amount; to what causes might this be due?

179. Of what are furnace bars generally made? About what thickness are they at the top? About what space is between them.

180. About how many tons of steam coal will be burnt per day in four furnaces, each 3' 0" wide, and of about the usual length? On what grounds do you say so?

181. About how many tons of steam coal will be burnt per day with a good triple expansion engine, surface condensers, the low pressure cylinder 40 inches diameter, doing average work? On what grounds do you say so?

182. A pair of inverted cylinder direct acting engines, there is a liner half an inch thick between the ahead eccentric rod and the eccentric strap, in overhauling the engine this place is lost and forgotton; what difference will its omission make in the working of the engine, on the admission, on the cut off, and on the exhaust of the steam? Which will take place earlier and which later, distinguishing between the up stroke and the down stroke?

183. In a pair of inverted cylinder direct acting engines driving a right-hand screw, on which of the crosshead guide bars is the pressure greatest in the up stroke, and on which in the down stroke?

184. A screw propeller is getting loose, it has a little play on the shaft, sideways on the key or feather; how will this show in the engine room?

185. How would you prove whether the centre line of the trunnions of an oscilating cylinder be fair with the centre line of the main shaft?

186. How can the fairness of a line of screw shafting be tested without lifting the shafts?

187. Where are steel forgings generally used in marine engines?

188. What is the composition of nickel-steel? Where is it sometimes used in engines and boilers?

189. How is forced draught generated on board ship and supplied to boiler-furnaces? Is the air heated before delivery? If so, how?

190. What is "induced" draughts? Compare the merits of "forced" and of "induced" draught.

191. How is the intensity of forced or induced draught measured? What is the usual pressure employed in the mercantile marine?

192. An explosive gas is liberated from bunker coal. Usually in well ventilated bunkers this gas escapes into the atmosphere without doing harm. In ill-ventilated bunkers the gas after mixing with a certain proportion of common air has been known to explode when a naked light has been brought into contact with it. What is the composition of the gas? Where is it found, in bunkers, pockets and coal shoots? How may it be got rid of as soon as it evolves from the coal? How many cubic feet of air to one of the gas forms a violent explosive mixture?

193. A lighted lamp or candle has sometimes been lowered into an apparently empty paraffin tank and produced an explosion resulting in injury to the person holding the light. What did the tank probably contain, and what produced the explosion?

194. In vessels carrying coal cargoes it has been observed that, generally speaking, the gas which escapes from the body of the coal is found more abundantly at the forward end of the hold than at the after end. Why should this be so?

195. In recently opened ballast tanks, double-bottoms and boilers, a light lowered into either has sometimes been extinguished. What would, in all probability, cause this?

196. In double-bottom steamers where does the bilge water lie, and where are the roses of the bilge pipes fitted?

197. What is the advantage of a large rose over a small one?

198. Why, especially in vessels carrying cargoes liable to shift, should engine bilge suctions be fitted to both wings of the bilge?

199. In a heavily listed vessel, why is it difficult to keep steam?

200. What means are sometimes provided for temporarily coupling together the broken parts of, say, a tunnel-shaft? Describe the fitting.

201. Does the pressure on the thrust-collars vary with the horse-power or with the speed of the ship, or how?

202. If the holding-down bolts of a thrust-bearing should become slack, what effect would it have upon the working of the engines?

203. In an engine with three cranks, which of the three is subject to the greatest torsional stress (1) in going ahead, (2) in going astern?

204. Is it usual to make the crank shaft of a triple or quadruple expansion engine in one piece? And is the diameter of the shaft uniform from end to end? Give your reasons for the practice which obtains.

205. In a "built" crank shaft how are the webs rigidly secured to the pins and to the body of shaft?

206. There are various descriptions of donkey engines in use on board ship for pumping purposes. Some pumps are fitted with escape-valves, some or not. Why should this be?

207. Explain the function of an air vessel fitted to a feed pump. Make rough hand sketches of (1) a satisfactory vessel, 2) an unsatisfactory vessel, where, say, the air spring has been destroyed by carelessness, or has never been properly provided.

208. Should cocks or escape valves be fitted to air-vessels? Why, or why not?

209. Where, by preference, should the escape valve of a feed pump be placed? Why?

210. Scum cocks are sometimes fitted to boiler-shells at a height convenient for Engineers to manipulate when standing in the stokehold; the scum pipes in such cases are laid upward, inside the boiler, to a little above the combustion chamber tops. What danger may arise from this arrangement?

211. Cocks for testing the water level of boilers are sometimes fitted within reach of the engineer who is standing in the stokehold. These may have internal pipes leading upward and terminating at various levels. Under what circumstances may these become misleading?

212. Why should the pipe which leads from the bottom of the water-gauge column to the bottom of the boiler-front, or back, be covered with non-conducting material? Why also should it never have lengthy horizontal bends?

213. In your own experience, how frequently is this pipe removed and cleared?

214. Why, even with the best of water-gauges, is it advisable occasionally to use the drain-cock.

215. Steam loops have sometimes been inadvertently made in the length of piping leading from the top of the water-gauge column to the top of the boiler. Roughly sketch such a loop and explain the danger arising from its existence.

216. Describe your method of thoroughly testing the water-gauge system to satisfy yourself that all the cocks and pipes are clear. Your answer can be written on a supplementary sheet of foolscap, which the Examiner will hand you. Hand sketches, mere lines indicating pipes, and circles indicating cocks, should be made. Identify the cocks and pipes by letters or numerals.

217. Describe the construction of a water-tube boiler, mentioning the type selected.

218. In a water-tube boiler how is an economiser fitted, and what is its duty?

219 How is the water-gauge fitted in a water-tube boiler? Are glass-gauges used?

220. The pressure of the steam in water-tube boilers is sometimes greater than at the engines. Why is this, and what percentage above the engine pressure does it amount to? How is this difference of pressure maintained?

221. Describe any automatic method of feeding water-tube boilers. Of what material are the tubes made?

222. Describe the construction of any steam turbine you are acquainted with, which is used on board ship. How is the expansion of steam effected? How many propeller shafts are employed, and how many propellers?

223. Is the same power in a steam turbine available to go astern as to go ahead?

224. Of what material are the propellers made in a steam turbine?

225. How many pounds of coal per indicated horse-power per hour are burnt with turbine engines? Name the type of boiler in use.

226. Describe the construction of a feed-water-heater and give the name of its manufacturer.

227. To about what temperature is the feed-water raised by passing through a feed-heater?

228. What fittings are usually placed on a feed-heater? Why are they necessary?

229 Describe any well-known independent feed-pumps.

230. Are independent feed-pumps automatic in their action? Explain the action.

231. What advantage, if any, have independent feed-pumps over feed-pumps worked by the main engines?

232. Describe the construction of a feed-filter, enumerating its valves and cocks.

233. How can the filter be cleaned? What ingredients are generally removed when cleaning takes place?

234. What is the intercepting material in a filter made of? How is it fitted?

235. Describe an evaporator, and mention the type.

236. What fittings are necessary with evaporators?

237. How is the brine got rid of in an evaporator?

238. How may the evaporator coils be cleaned?

239. What is a dynamo? Describe its various parts. For what is it used?

240. In what respect does an electric motor differ from a dynamo? Where are electric motors sometimes used on board ship?

241. Describe a system of electric lighting employed on board ship.

242. How is the position of a fault in the electric circuit discovered?

243. What is "sparking" and may it under some circumstances (naming them) be a danger?

244. What is "short-circuiting," and to what evil may it give rise?

245. What means are employed to prevent any part of the circuit becoming overheated?

246. Describe the features of an arc-lamp.

247. Describe the construction of a glow-lamp.

248. What is the usual candle-power of the small glow-lamps in general use on board ship?

249. Define the following terms:—Ampère, volt, ohm, watt. What is the measure of an electrical horse-power?

250. Explain the uses of switches, brushes, commutators, cut-outs, field-magnets, armatures and resistance-coils.

251. Why is it desirable to fit a dynamo in a cool place on board ship?

252. What undesirable effect will ultimately occur to an electric wire whose sectional area is constantly diminishing, say, through corrosion?

253. What danger might arise from leading electric wires through coal bunkers?

254. Is it better to lead electric wires above or below side-scuttles? Why?

255. What instruments are used on board ship to ascertain the strength of an electric current?

256. In vessels fitted with hydraulic cranes, etc., where do they obtain their power? How is the hydraulic pressure kept at a relatively constant amount?

257. Describe any steam-steering gear you are acquainted with.

258. When the helm is put hard over and the ship is going full speed ahead, what prevents the rudder returning to the amidship position?

259. In the case of a steamship under way, does the officer or man manipulating the steam-steering wheel overcome any resistance exerted by the rudder?

260. Explain clearly what is being done by a helmsman manipulating the wheel of a steam-steering engine.

261. Is there any difference between the amount of horse-power required to put a helm hard over, in a given time, when the vessel is going full speed ahead, and when she is going full speed astern? This question refers to the case of a steamer fitted with one rudder only, and demands a more complete answer than merely "yes" or "no."

262. What precautions should be taken before removing a man-hole-door of a steam-boiler? In the absence of such precautions, what casualties might occur?

263. Describe the chief features of the engine-governor fitted to a steamer you have served in. Describe its action, give the maker's name and name of ship.

264. Name the principal parts of internal combustion engines, and briefly state their functions.

265. What kind of oil is usually employed in motor-engines? What is its flash-point? What is its specific gravity? What is its calorific power? What precautions are taken in its storage to guard the public against the casualty by fire or explosion?

266. How many cylinders are generally used in motor-engines? What kind of pistons are usually fitted? How frequently (measured in revolutions) is explosion per cylinder effected? How is explosion in the cylinder carried out?

267. Describe how an oil-motor is started. If starting proves difficult, where would you chiefly look for defects? How is piston speed modified? How is the speed of vessel varied? How is reversing effected?

268. Before examining an oil-motor with a naked light, what steps should be taken for safety's sake?

269. How frequently should an internal combustion engine be opened up for examination, cleaned, and its parts re-adjusted? What difficulty arises when the internal parts become foul with carbonized oil?

NOTE.—Questions should be read in the light of their context. Thus the "sparking" referred to in question 243 relates to the sparking in an electric lighting circuit on board ship. (See question 241.)

APPENDIX C.

[See RULE 25(d)].

Reading the Water-Gauges.

(Engineers and Engine-drivers.)

Notwithstanding that the reading of the water-gauge is made a special feature in the examination of Engineers, many boiler casualties result from the Engineer of the watch either not understanding the construction of the water-gauge fittings or not satisfying himself by actual trial that the cocks, pipes, etc., are clear.

In one case, two furnace crowns came down in a steamer that was just starting on a voyage. The Engineers were satisfied that there was plenty of water in the boiler because the water-gauge showed full glass, and they called the attention of the Surveyor to this fact as being conclusive evidence that the casualty could not have resulted from shortness of water. On examination of the fittings, however, it was found that the cock between the boiler and the steam pipe leading to the gauge was shut, having been carelessly left in that position on the previous day when the mountings were overhauled for survey. Directly the cock was opened the water disappeared from the gauge glass, and the Second Engineer admitted that he had blown down the boiler in order to lower the water level, as the glass was full.

Many steamers have had their furnaces brought down at sea in a simila manner to the above through what the Engineers of the watch have calle "false water in the glass," and which on examination has been found t result from the top communication being choked.

These casualties resulted from what, to say the least, was bad manage ment, not false water.

Unless a candidate under examination is able to prove that he under stands how to verify the indications of the water-gauge, he should not b passed in practical knowledge and, as failure in practical knowledge involve the candidate going to sea for another three months before being eligibl for re-examination, the Examiner should explain to such candidate his error, after failing him, in order to prevent further casualties resulting from his want of knowledge on this subject.

The sketches, Figures 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, Plate I, represent the usual methods of attaching water-gauge mountings to marine boilers. The important features in each gauge and the method of verifying its indications are dealt with separately in the following remarks :—

In this case the water-gauge cocks are attached direct to the boiler, and the accuracy of the gauge when the boiler is under steam can be tested as follows:—

First.—Let B remain open, then close cock D and open cock E, and if steam issues it proves that cock B and the passage through the top fitting and gauge glass are clear. If no steam or water issues, either cock B or the passage through the top fitting and gauge glass is choked and the gauge cannot act properly until the obstruction is removed.

Second.—Close cock B and open D and E, and if water issues, cock D is clear. If no water or steam issues, either cock D or the passage from the boiler through the lower fitting is choked and must be cleared before the gauge can act properly.

REFERRING TO FIGURE 2 ONLY.

In this case the gauge cocks are attached to a bent pipe of comparatively large diameter (at least 3 inches in the bore), the upper end of which communicates with the steam space, and the lower end with the water space of the boiler. Owing to the bore of the pipe being large it is not liable to become choked or stopped under the ordinary conditions of working. The water-gauge is, therefore, in practically the same condition as if it were attached direct to the boiler, as in Figure 1. This gauge, when at work, is tested in precisely the same manner as the one shown in Figure 1.

Screw plugs are inserted at P.P. and Q.Q., by the removal of which the apertures in the pipe can be cleared, if necessary, by the insertion of a wire or rod when steam is down.

REFERRING TO FIGURE 3 ONLY.

In this gauge there is an open communication from A to C through the column Y, and in order to "blow through the glass" it is only necessary to shut cocks D and B alternately keeping E open. But to "blow through the water-gauge," including the pipes H and I, it is necessary, after blowing through the glass as described above, to shut A and C alternately, at the same time keeping B, D and E open for such time as will ensure the complete discharge of the contents of the gauge and its connections. When B, D and C are clear and A choked the steam lodging in the glass and in the pipe I leading from column Y to A becomes condensed and the water flowing through C to take its place rises in column Y and in the glass to a level above that of the water in the boiler. In other words, the gauge shows a false level. If now E be opened and water is blown out, then on E being again closed the water in the gauge will rise higher than before and be still further misleading. On the other hand, when B, D and A are clear and C choked, the water, if any, in the glass is trapped and no longer rises and falls with the water in the boiler or with the motion of the vessel; it, however, slowly rises in the glass owing to the condensation of the steam in the upper part of the gauge until such time as E is opened when the whole of the water in the glass is blown out, and on E being closed the glass does not show any water notwithstanding that the water in the boiler may be at the proper level. When the test cocks T T T are attached to column Y, as shown in Figure 3, they cease to be reliable when either cock A or C or the pipe in connection therewith is choked, or nearly choked.

REFERRING TO FIGURE 4 ONLY.

Sometimes the water-gauge fittings are arranged as shown in Figures 4 and 5, with no passage up the column, the central portion (N) of the column, being simply a pillar or connecting piece of any convenient section between the upper and lower portions to which the cocks B and D are attached.

By this arrangement double communications are obviated and there is no need for what is known as "double shut off" in testing the accuracy of the gauge. When, however, the gauges are constructed in this manner the cocks B and D are unreliable as test cocks in the event of there being no glass in the gauge. This feature should be carefully noted. Moreover, when in working condition the reduction of pressure in the glass which arises when E is opened causes the water in pipe H to rise above its normal level. This objectionable feature should also be noted.

Referring to Figure 5 only.

Sometimes there is a bend, L, in the steam pipe, I, leading from cock A to cock B. This has occasionally escaped observation when new boilers have been fitted on board ship. In most cases this bend arises from the pipe being led in an abnormal direction to escape other pipes, beams or fittings near the smoke-box. With such a bend the condensed steam collects in the pipe and falls to the bottom of the bend, and in time it completely fills the pipe from J to K. The steam from K down to the level of the water in the glass is thereby trapped and, as condensation proceeds, leads to a reduction of pressure in the pipe below that of the boiler and an equivalent rise of the water in the bend and also in the gauge glass. When the vessel is quiescent the water in the gauge glass increases in height until cock E is opened or until the pressure in the boiler is so much in excess of that in the lower part of pipe I, as to cause the water in the bend to be blown into the gauge glass. In either case instantaneous change to water level in the glass ensues.

In the ordinary course of working the phenomenon described above is more or less modified by the presence of air in the upper part of the gauge and by the rise and fall of the water in the boiler and gauge glass arising from the rolling or pitching motions of the vessel.

Other Special Points to be noted.

When the cocks A and C are omitted, as in Figure 2, it is owing to the bore of the stand pipe being sufficiently large to enable it to be regarded as part of the boiler. Such pipes require, however, to be examined and cleared at intervals by passing a rod through the holes provided for the purpose at P.P. and Q.Q.

Cocks at A and C are not necessary for the testing of gauges arranged as shown in Figures 4 and 5. Examiners ought, however, to make sure that candidates are aware of the impossibility of testing the reliability of the indications of water-gauges arranged as in Figure 3 when the cocks A and C are absent and of the effect which the choking of cock A or C, or pipe H or I has on the indications of the test cocks T T T attached to column Y.

Probably more than half the steamers afloat are fitted with water-gauges as shown in Figures 3 and 4, and it is therefore specially important that Engineer candidates should thoroughly understand their construction, the principle on which they act, and the steps which must be taken to keep them in an efficient condition.

When fitting a gauge glass into its place it is specially important that it should not be placed so high as to prevent a clearing rod being inserted at G, Figures 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. This defect, especially if it occurs in a water-gauge attached to a boiler subject to priming, permits a rapid accumulation of scum around the top of the glass and results in the choking of the orifice leading from cock B to the gauge glass in each of the figures.

When a gauge glass is too short or is placed either too high or too low in the fittings, it is also liable to become choked by the packing material being forced over its ends by the glands whilst being screwed up.

The use of unsuitable or insecure internal pipes in connection either with the ordinary glass gauge cocks of the description shown in Figure 1, or with test cocks which are jointed to the boiler itself should also be carefully guarded against.

Boiler casualties have resulted from the cocks B and D having the parts wrongly placed as shown in Figure 6, Plate 2. In one case of that kind, the Engineer in testing the water-gauge omitted to see that the passages in the cocks B and D were clear when the handles were in their proper working position. This defect could easily have been discovered if proper attention had been paid to the condition of the cocks. A defect of this nature may be due to faulty construction originally, or to the handle of the cock having been overstrained, and the neck twisted, Whether the passages in the plugs are fair and clear can, however, be verified in a few minutes. As an illustration, the water cock D, Figure 6, Plate II, can be verified by blowing through E with B shut and then moving the handle of D to one side until it is just closed, and then to the other side until it is again just closed; the proper working position of the handle is about equally distant from each of the above positions. The other cocks can be verified in the same manner.

Another serious casualty occurred through the handle of the cock A, Figure 3, having been twisted from its original position relatively to the orifice of the cock, resulting in the cock being shut when apparently open.

When a water-gauge, that is clear in all its parts, has been thoroughly blown through, the water in the glass rises above the level at which it formerly stood, immediately the drain cock E is closed, but if left undisturbed for a time it gradually falls to its former position. The amount of rise which occurs on these occasions depends chiefly on the temperature of the contents of the boiler and on the length of the pipes by which column Y is connected top and bottom to the boiler, but in cases where the gauge is of the description illustrated in Figures 3, 4 and 5, it amounts in high pressure boilers to about 4 inches, while the time occupied by the water in returning to its former level ranges from 30 to 40 minutes. The cause of this rise is twofold, namely, (a) the displacement of the comparatively cold water in pipe H by hotter, and proportionately lighter, water from the boiler, and (b) a slight condensation of the steam and a corresponding fractional reduction of pressure in pipe I. The cause of the gradual subsidence of the water in the glass to its former level is also of a dual character, namely, (a) the cooling of the water in pipe H, and (b) the diminution in the condensation of steam in pipe I owing to the collection therein of air released from the steam condensed.

These results will, however, be somewhat modified if the water in the boiler is of higher density than in pipe H, and this will nearly always be the case owing to the condensation of the steam in the glass and upper fittings of the water-gauge, causing the water in the lower part to be fresher than that in the boiler.

The Examiner should impress upon candidates the necessity for periodically blowing through the water-gauge on each boiler (no matter what the form may be) in a systematic and thorough manner, and, in cases where a boiler is fitted with two water-gauges, of keeping both in constant use; finally, he should further impress upon them the necessity for keeping the water-gauges well lighted, clean, and in all respects efficient.

APPENDIX D.

[See RULES 25 (n) AND 25(o).]

Examination in rough working drawing for an Engineer's Certificate of Competency.

1. The regulations in regard to the qualifications of a candidate for an Engineer's certificate of competency specify that—

He will be required to make an intelligible hand sketch, or a working drawing of some one or more of the principal parts of a steam-engine, and to mark in, without a copy, all the necessary dimensions in figures, so that the sketch or drawing could be worked from.

He must be able to state the general proportions borne by the principal parts of the machinery to each other.

2. In accordance with these clauses, a candidate for an Engineer's certificate is required to make a rough working drawing of the parts specified. An Engineer who has been some years in charge of marine engines and boilers ought to have familiarly in his mind the general construction of at least one set of engines and boilers, say, that set he was last with.

Fine drawing is not expected, and in the proportions of the parts a wide margin will be allowed ; absurd dimensions will be failure in practical knowledge.

3. The drawing must, however, be practically a working drawing, giving a sufficient number of views to show the parts fully—sections, plans, or elevations—just as the candidate would require to be supplied to him if he had to make the parts represented to the design of another person.

4. A clear hand sketch showing the construction completely, and fully dimensioned, will be accepted if the candidate prefers this alternative.

5. A portion only of the parts specified may be accepted in place of the whole, if that portion is sufficient to show that the candidate has a good practical idea of the construction of the parts, and a fair notion of their general proportions or dimensions.

6. Candidates are cautioned not to put on paper what they have not fully considered, and deliberately intend to be understood, as evidence of what they know about the construction of any part required.

7. The statements given in by a candidate may be in themselves, apparently, of little importance, but, as sample material from which the extent of the candidate's knowledge of engines and boilers is to be inferred, every detail which is glaringly inconsistent with a sound knowledge of the use of the part, or in which an essential consideration has evidently been overlooked, is an important element in the description which the candidate is giving of his own qualifications.

8. The candidate is advised not to begin more than he can clearly finish in the time allowed. An important object in this part of the examination is to ascertain whether the candidate can be trusted to mark all necessary dimensions upon a sketch or a drawing. The test of this is, practically, the making of the part from the sketch without having to supply additional dimensions, and without measuring the drawing. To prove this ability the candidate must fully dimension the parts shown in his sketch or drawing, notwithstanding that the parts may be correctly drawn to scale. A drawing is fully dimensioned when no part of it is left to the option of the party who is to work to the drawing.

9. To prevent misunderstanding, however, when the candidate has been led into showing more of the details than he has time fully to finish, he should name, in the statement on the other side, the particular parts which he has fully dimensioned.

10. All dimensions should have lines and darts, to indicate distinctly the points between which the dimensions are given.

11. Beware of writing cross dimensions upon centre lines, or upon longitudinal dimension lines. This is not an order, but a recommendation.

12. The candidate is not expected to design anything ; he has merely to sketch or draw something with which he is expected to be already familiar. At the same time he should call attention to any defect in the design of the article or apparatus. Omission to do so will imply want of practical knowledge.

13. Pencil in nothing after half-past 3 ; all the dimensions, the figures, and the darts must be inked in ; employ the remaining time in examining the drawing and in inking in any figures which may have been before overlooked and in checking the dimensions.

14. Make sure that you will have sufficient room on the drawing sheet to show all the necessary views. You can have another sheet of drawing paper if necessary. All the paper used must be forwarded with the drawing.

No. 1502-W.—The following Royal Proclamation is published for general information :—

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION.

MAKING CERTAIN ADDITIONS TO AND AMENDMENTS IN THE LIST OF ARTICLES TO BE TREATED AS CONTRABAND OF WAR.

GEORGE R.I.

WHEREAS on the 14th day of October 1915, We did issue Our Royal Proclamation specifying the articles which it was Our intention to treat as contraband during the continuance of hostilities or until We did give further public notice ; and

Whereas it is expedient to make certain further additions to and amendments in the said list :

NOW THEREFORE, We do hereby declare, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council that, during the continuance of the war or until We do give further public notice, the following articles will be treated as absolute contraband, in addition to those set out in Schedule I of Our Royal Proclamation aforementioned :—

Cork, including cork dust.
Bones in any form, whole or crushed, and bone ash.
Soap.
Vegetable fibres and yarns made therefrom.

And We do hereby further declare that as from this date the following amendments shall be made in Schedule I of Our Royal Proclamation aforementioned :—

In item 8, for "acetone" shall be substituted "acetones, and raw or finished materials usable for their preparation."

In item 9, for "phosphorus" shall be substituted "phosphorus and its compound."

In item 26 there shall be added after the word "parts" the words "and accessories."

In item 38 the more general term "lead" shall be substituted for the words "lead, pig, sheet, or pipe."

And We do hereby further declare that the following articles shall as from this date be treated as conditional contraband in addition to those set out in Schedule II of Our Royal Proclamation aforementioned :—

Casein.

Bladders, guts, casings, and sausage skins.

Given at Our Court at Buckingham Palace, this Twenty-seventh day of January, in the year of our Lord One thousand nine hundred and sixteen, and in the Sixth year of Our Reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

No. 1557-W.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sub-section (1) of section 3 of the Enemy Trading Act, 1915 (XIV of 1915), the Governor General in Council is pleased to appoint the undermentioned officers to act as Custodians for the purpose of receiving, holding and dealing with such money as may be paid to them in pursuance of the said Act, in respect of the territories specified against them.

GEOLOGY AND MINERALS.

The 26th February 1916.

No. 641-132.—The following draft of amendments which it is proposed to make, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 20 of the Indian Mines Act, 1901 (VIII of 1901), in the rules issued with Notification No. 11793-103 (Geology and Minerals), dated the 30th December 1908, is published, as required by the same section, for the information of persons concerned. Notice is hereby given that the draft will be taken into consideration by the Governor-General in Council on or after the 26th May 1916.

Any objection or suggestion which may be received from any person with respect to the draft before the date fixed aforesaid will be considered by the Governor-General in Council :—

Draft amendments.

For Rule I substitute the following, namely :—

Annual returns.

Forms I, II, III, IV, V and VI, respectively, for Coal, Mica and mines other than Coal or Mica in the Schedule hereto annexed shall be (1) filled up in duplicate by the agent, or if there is no agent, by the owner or manager of a Coal, Mica or other Mine, as the case may be, and one copy of each shall be forwarded to the Chief Inspector of Mines and the other to the District Magistrate not later than the 21st January (2) in each year.

Rule 8. For the words "Form V" substitute the words "Form VII".

For the Schedule appended to the Rules the following shall be substituted, namely :—

(1) Under Section 22 (2) (b) of the Indian Mines Act, failure to forward correct returns to the Chief Inspector of Mines not later than the 21st January in each year will render the agent, owner or manager liable, on conviction, to a penalty which may extend to Rs. 500.

(2) It will greatly facilitate the preparation of the statistics if the returns are despatched as soon as possible after the close of the year.

Advertisement of Sale.

NOTICE is hereby given that the proprietary right of Government, as specified in the conditions of sale below, to the undermentioned estates, situated in the district of Nadia, will be put up to sale at the Nadia Collectorate on the 27th March 1916, corresponding with 14th Chaitra of 1322 B.S.

The purchasers will be subject to the following conditions of sale :—

Conditions of Sale.

1st.—The estate to be sold to the highest bidder above the upset price which will be fixed by the Collector at the time of sale. The purchaser of this estate will be considered as the proprietor of the estate, and the entire proprietary right of Government in such estate will be transferred to him subject to the revenue fixed in perpetuity.

2nd.—The sale to be subject to the existing leases and to the rights conferred by the settlement proceedings, and by the laws in force, and purchasers to be bound to respect the rights of resident cultivators who have signed the schedule of assessment prepared by the Revenue authorities.

3rd.—If the amount of purchase-money does not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount to be paid down at once.

4th.—If the amount of purchase money exceed Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount bid to be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale is to be cancelled (the sum deposited being forfeited to Government), and the estate to be again put up to sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt: and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or

the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

CALCUTTA, the 21st February 1916.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

Caution when Approaching British Ports.

No. 46 (first publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1 of 1916), are republished:—

PART I.

CLOSING OF PORTS.

Former Notice.—No. 700 of 1915. (This Office No. 250 of 1915.)

(1) My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, having taken into consideration the fact that it may be necessary to forbid all entrance to certain ports of the Empire, this is to give Notice that on approaching the shores of the United Kingdom, or any of the ports or localities of the British Empire, referred to in Part III of this Notice, a sharp look-out should be kept for the signals described in the following paragraph, and for the vessels mentioned in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice, and the distinguishing and other signals made by them. In the event of such signals being displayed, the port or locality should be approached with great caution, as it may be apprehended that obstructions may exist.

(2) If entrance to a port is prohibited, three red vertical lights by night, or three red vertical balls by day, will be exhibited in some conspicuous position, in or near to its approach, which signals will also be shown by the vessels indicated in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice.

If these signals are displayed, vessels must either proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

(3) At all the ports or localities at home or abroad referred to in Part III of this Notice, search-lights are occasionally exhibited for exercise.

Instructions have been given to avoid directing moveable search-lights during practice on to vessels under way, but mariners are warned that great care should be taken to keep a sharp look-out for the signals indicated in paragraph (2) above, when search-lights are observed to be working.

PART II.

EXAMINATION SERVICE.

(4) In certain circumstances it is also necessary to take special measures to examine vessels desiring to enter the ports or localities at home or abroad, referred to in Part III of this Notice.

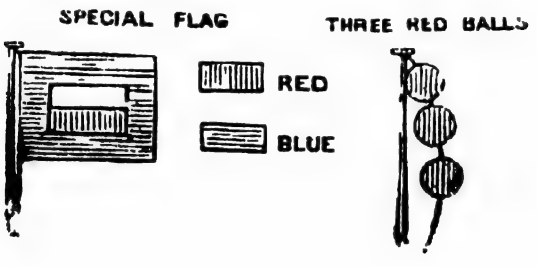
(5) In such case, vessels carrying the distinguishing flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7) will be charged with the duty of examining ships which desire to enter the ports and of allotting positions in which they shall anchor. If Government vessels, or vessels belonging to the local port authority, are found patrolling in the offing, merchant vessels are advised to communicate with such vessels with a view to obtaining information as to the course on which they should approach the Examination Anchorage. Such communication will not be necessary in cases where the pilot on board has already received this information from the local authorities.

(6) As the institution of the Examination Service at any port will never be publicly advertised, especial care should be taken in approaching the ports, by day or night, to keep a sharp look-out for any vessel carrying the flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7), and to be ready to "bring to" at once when hailed by her or warned by the firing of a gun or sound rocket.

In entering by night any of the ports mentioned in Part III, serious delay and risk will be avoided if four efficient all round lamps, two red and two white, are kept available for use.

(7) By day the distinguishing flags of the Examination Steamer will be a special flag (white and red horizontal surrounded by a blue border) and a blue ensign.

Also, three red vertical balls if the port is closed.



By night the steamer will carry :—

(a) Three red vertical lights if the port is closed.
(b) Three white vertical lights if the port is open.

The above lights will be carried in addition to the ordinary navigation lights, and will show an unbroken light around the horizon.

(8) Masters are warned that, when approaching a British port where the Examination Service is in force, they must have the distinguishing signal of their vessel ready to hoist immediately the Examination Steamer makes the signal.

(9) Masters are warned that, before attempting to enter any of these ports when the Examination Service is in force, they must in their own interests strictly obey all instructions given to them by the Examination Steamer. In the absence of any instructions from the Examination Steamer they must proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

Whilst at anchor in the Examination Anchorage, Masters are warned that they must not lower any boats (except to avoid accident), communicate with the shore, work cables, move the ship, or allow anyone to leave the ship, without permission from the Examination Steamer.

(10) In case of fog, Masters are enjoined to use the utmost care, and the Examination Anchorage itself should be approached with caution.

(11) Merchant vessels when approaching ports are especially cautioned against making use of private signals of any description, either by day or night: the use of them will render a vessel liable to be fired on.

(12) The pilots attached to the ports will be acquainted with the regulations to be followed.

PART IV.

SWEEPING OPERATIONS.

H.M. Vessels are constantly engaged in sweeping operations off ports in the United Kingdom.

Whilst so engaged, they work in pairs connected by a wire hawser, and are consequently hampered to a very considerable extent in their manœuvring powers.

With a view to indicating the nature of the work on which these vessels are engaged, they will show the following signals:—

A black ball at the foremast head and a similar ball at the yardarm, or where it can best be seen, on that side on which it is dangerous for vessels to pass.

For the public safety, all other vessels, whether steamers or sailing craft, must keep out of the way of vessels flying this signal, and should especially remember that it is dangerous to pass between the vessels of a pair.

Note.

This Notice is a republication of Notice No. 700 of 1915. (This office No. 250 of 1915.)

Second Forecast of the Wheat Crop of Bengal, 1915-16.

(Note.—On an average of the five years ending 1913-14 the area under wheat in Bengal has represented some 0·5 per cent. of the total area under wheat in India. The ratio of irrigated wheat acreage to total wheat acreage in (a) British India and (b) in the territory now reported on has in the five years ending 1913-14 averaged (a) 37·6 per cent. and (b) 16·6 per cent., respectively.)

Character of the season.—Although the rainfall in September and October in the wheat-growing districts of Bengal was generally somewhat in defect, there was sufficient moisture in the ground for carrying on sowing operations in normal time. The only district where the sowings are reported to be late is Jessore. This was due to floods resulting from the rise of river water. There was light but well distributed rainfall in November which helped the growth of the crop; but December and January were practically rainless. The total absence of rain during these two winter months has to a great extent affected the prospects of the crop In Malda, the principal wheat-growing district in this province the season was favourable at the beginning; but lack of rain has recently been keenly felt. The weather conditions have also been favourable in Midnapore and Rangpur; but these districts are not of much importance in respect of wheat growing. The character of the season in the rest of the province may be regarded as fair.

Area sown.—The total area sown this year is 133,600 acres, against 134,700 acres estimated in the second forecast and 134,100 acres in the final forecast of last year.

Outturn.—The outturn in the important wheat-growing districts as estimated by District Officers is as follows :—Nadia 12 per cent.; Murshidabad 75 per cent.; Malda 100 per cent.; and Pabna 60 per cent. According to the estimate of the District Officers the provincial outturn works out to 78 per cent., against 63 and 61 per cents., respectively, in the second and final forecasts of last year.

Second Forecast of the Wheat Crop of 1915-16.

DISTRICT.	Estimated normal area under wheat.	ESTIMATED AREA UNDER WHEAT—		ESTIMATED OUTTURN AS A PERCENTAGE OF THE NORMAL YIELD PER UNIT OF AREA—		Date by which the sowing generally commenced this year, and whether that date was early, normal or late.	REMARKS BY DISTRICT OFFICERS.
		Last year.	This year.	Last year.	This year.
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Nadia	23,100	18,200	16,000	42	42	Middle of October. Normal.	The decrease in area, as compared with the estimate in the first forecast and with the area of last year, is due to unequal distribution of rainfall at the sowing time. The insufficiency of rainfall throughout the season retarded the growth of the crop and damaged it considerably. Hence the low outturn.
Murshidabad ...	69,200	31,600	31,300	67	75	October and November. Normal.	The decrease in area is due to want of timely rainfall. Some damage was done by drought and insect-pests.
Jessore	2,300	1,100	1,100	54	66	October and November; late in Jhenidah subdivision.	The weather conditions have not been favourable for want of sufficient rainfall. The drought retarded the growth of the crop and caused damage to the extent of four annas in the Jhenidah subdivision.
Burdwan	1,800	2,000	2,000	75	75	Middle of October. Normal.	The weather was much too dry, and not favourable except in Sadar subdivision. In the Asansole subdivision the crop was benefitted to a certain extent by the light showers at the end of November. Some damage was reported from the Kalna and Katwa subdivisions owing to drought.
Birbhum	5,000	4,100	4,100	67	75	Beginning of October. Early.	The weather conditions have been fair. Damage to the extent of about three annas was caused by drought.
Bankura	3,600	3,600	3,600	83	83	End of October. Normal.	The character of the weather and the general condition of the crop have been fair. Outturn is expected to be below the normal owing to scanty rainfall throughout the season.
Midnapore	2,600	1,300	1,300	75	100	Beginning of November. Normal.	The character of the weather since the submission of the first forecast has been favourable. A normal crop is expected.
Hooghly	2,400	1,700	1,700	83	83	Middle of October. Normal.	The outturn is likely to fall below the normal on account of scanty rainfall at the time of sowing.
Rajshahi ...	8,800	7,800	7,800	65	75	First part of November. Normal.	The outturn is expected to fall below the normal for want of timely rainfall.
Dinajpur ...	1,000	1,400	1,400	50	65	End of October. Normal.	The character of the weather has not been quite favourable. Owing to unseasonable rainfall the outturn is likely to fall below the normal.
Jalpaiguri ...	1,000	900	900	78	80	Middle of November. Normal.	The weather conditions have not been quite favourable owing to deficient rainfall. Hence the outturn is expected to fall below the normal.
Darjeeling ...	4,800	4,400	4,400	64	75	September. Normal ...	The character of the season has not been favourable Damage to the extent of 30 per cent. has been caused by drought. Hence the low outturn.
Rangpur ...	3,000	3,400	3,400	90	90	Beginning of November. Normal.	The weather conditions have been favourable and the present condition of the crop is fairly good.
Pabna	16,000	12,000	12,000	50	60	Middle of November ...	Want of rain has retarded the growth of the crop and hence the outturn is estimated to be much below the normal.
Malda	60,000	38,000	40,000	60	100	End of October. Normal.	The increase in area as compared with that of the last year is due to favourable weather at the time of sowing. The weather has hitherto been favourable, but a light shower is now required.
Faridpur	2,700	2,700	2,700	85	80	Beginning of November. Normal.	The weather has not been favourable. Drought has affected the growth of the crop and damaged it by about 20 per cent.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Second Forecast of the Spring Oilseed Crops of Bengal, 1915-16.

[NOTE.—On the average of the five years ending 1913-14 the area under linseed in Bengal represents some 5·9 per cent., and that under rape and mustard 21·4 per cent. of the total area under these crops in British India.]

Area sown.—Oilseeds are grown principally in the Rajshahi, Dacca and Presidency Divisions. In the other two divisions the area under the crops is small. The total area under the crops this year (excepting sesamum to which separate forecasts are devoted) amounts to 1,545,500 acres, against 1,527,100 acres (revised) last year and against 1,556,800 acres reported in the corresponding forecast of last year.

Character of the season.—The rainfall in the months of September and October, though defective, was general throughout the Province. Consequently sufficient moisture was left in the soil, and this helped the sowings, which generally took place at the normal time. There were good showers of rain in the third week of November which favoured the growth of the crops. But the total absence of rain during the months of December and January interfered with the growth of the crops to a considerable extent. Damage by insects is also reported from some places. On the whole, the season may be regarded as fair.

Outturn.—According to the estimates of the District Officers, the total outturn of the different kinds of oilseeds (excepting til) for the Province as a whole works out to 82 per cent., against 79 per cent. of the normal last year and against 78 per cent. reported in the corresponding forecast of last year.

APPENDIX I.

Second Forecast of the Spring Oilseed Crops of Bengal, 1915-16.

District.	Name of spring oilseed crops.	Estimated normal area under spring oilseeds.	Estimated area under spring oilseeds.		Taking 100 to represent the normal, what would be the average outturn per acre cropped.		Date by which the harvesting generally commenced this year, and whether that date was early, normal or late.	Remarks by District Officers.
			Last year (1914-15).	This year (1915-16).	Last year.	This year.
		Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
24-Parganas	Linseed	1,600	600*	600*	67	100	December to January. Normal.	The weather conditions have been favourable since the submission of the first forecast. The outturn is expected to be normal.
	Rape and mustard	1,500	800*	800*	67	92
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	300	200	300	67	117
	Total ...	3,400	1,600	1,700	67	100
Nadia ...	Linseed	55,700	40,200	40,100	50	50	Not yet commenced.	The slight decrease in area as compared with the last year is due to defective distribution of rainfall in the sowing season. Owing to absence of rain throughout the season the growth of the crop has suffered. Hence the outturn is expected to fall much below the normal.
	Rape and mustard	23,500	17 200	17,000	50	50
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	18,900	4,900	4,700	58	50
	Total ...	98,100	62,300	61,800	51	50
Murshidabad	Linseed	20,800	15,800	16,400	67	75	February. Normal	The increase in area as compared with last year is due to cultivation of the crop in those lands where paddy failed. The weather has not been very favourable. The damage done by drought and insect-pests is estimated at 25 per cent.
	Rape and mustard	18,900	14,500	15,400	67	75
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	8,700	3,900	4,200	67	75
	Total ...	48,400	34,200	36,000	67	75
Jessore ...	Linseed	24,000	15,200	15,300	63	75	January and February. Normal.	The decrease of area as compared with last year was due to want of sufficient rain in November and December which also affected the growth of the crops. The extent of damage owing to want of rain in proper time is anticipated to be 3 annas on the whole. The Subdivisional Officer of Magura reports that about half the area under rape and mustard has been partially damaged by insects in his subdivision. Hence the outturn is expected to fall much below the normal.
	Rape and mustard	49,600	30,700	29,800	88	50
	Other oilseeds (excluding til).	3,300	1,500	2,400	88	62
	Total ...	76,900	47,700	47,500	77	59
Khulna ...	Linseed	900	200	200	69	100	End of January. Normal.	The increase of area is due to favourable weather and to some new lands being brought under cultivation this year. The outturn is expected to be normal.
	Rape and mustard	29,700	18,600	19,700	92	100	Last week of December. Normal.
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	100	500	500	92	100	Not yet commenced.
	Total ...	30,700	19,300	20,400	92	100
Burdwan ...	Linseed	22,500	13,100	13,400	58	58	Not yet commenced	The weather has not been favourable. Some damage has been done by drought. Mustard has been partly damaged by insect-pests in some places in the Sadar subdivision.
	Rape and mustard	21,100	15,100	16,800	67	67	First week of January.	The outturn is expected to fall much below the normal for want of rain and also for damage done by insect-pests.
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	1,500	1,000	1,100	67	83	Not yet commenced.
	Total ...	45,100	29,200	31,300	63	64
Birbhum ...	Linseed	800	800*	800*	67	75	January to February. Normal.	The weather has been fair. The outturn is expected to fall below the normal owing to inadequate rainfall.
	Rape and mustard	2,000	2,000*	2,000*	67	67
	Other oilseeds (excepting til).	200	100	200	67	67

Midnapore ...	Linseed	15,000	13,500	11,400	75	84	End of January. Normal.	The increase in area shown under rape and mustard and other oilseeds over the estimates in the first forecast are due to revision made by certain reporting officers. Since the submission of the first forecast the weather has not on the whole been favourable. Some harm has been caused by the November rain. Hence the outturn is below the normal.

REPORT ON THE STATE OF THE SALT MARKET FOR THE THIRD QUARTER OF THE YEAR 1915-16.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

SEPARATE REVENUE BRANCH (SALT).

No. 370S.R.

Dated Calcutta, the 29th February 1916.

THE following report on the state of the salt market for the third quarter of the year 1915-16, comprising the months of October, November and December 1915, in the Presidency of Bengal is published for general information.

2. The quantity of salt of every description cleared during the quarter amounted to 3,858,569 maunds (including 2,651,255 maunds issued under the credit system), as compared with 3,497,656 maunds (including 2,434,089 maunds issued under the credit system) in the previous quarter and 4,735,576 maunds (including 3,231,850 maunds issued under the credit system) in the corresponding quarter of the previous year. The net amount of duty levied was Rs. 35,27,451 (including Rs. 25,20,254 adjusted under the credit system), as against Rs. 32,66,583 (including Rs. 23,29,476 adjusted under the credit system) in the previous quarter, and Rs. 50,38,073 (including Rs. 33,70,675 adjusted under the credit system) in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

* Inclusive of 2,651,255 maunds of salt issued under the credit system Besides this quantity, 24,477 maunds of salt were issued under the credit system to inland bonded warehouses

Compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year and the same quarter of 1913-14, importations were greater by 19·4 per cent. and less by 30·6 per cent., but clearances were less by 18·1 per cent. and greater by 6·9 per cent., respectively. As compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, the increased imports from the United Kingdom, Port Said, Spain, Massowah and Bombay and the decreased imports from Aden and Madras are noticeable.

4. Table II shows the quantity of sea-imported salt remaining in the warehouses at the close of the quarter as compared with the preceding four quarters :—

5. The figures showing the despatches of salt from Calcutta by different routes during the quarter under report will be published as usual in the Calcutta Gazette by the Director-General of Commercial Intelligence when they are available.

6. The quantity of salt despatched during the quarter by the East Indian Railway to stations beyond Buxar amounted to 2,473 maunds, as against 1,003 maunds in the previous quarter, and 820 maunds in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

7. The quantity of saltpetre salt excised in the refineries of Bengal during the quarter amounted to 20 maunds as compared with the same quantity in the previous quarter and nil in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

8. The shipments of Liverpool salt during the quarter for the port of Calcutta, according to the published market reports, amounted to 16,787 tons. As war exists with Germany, no vessel is at present bound for Calcutta with salt from Hamburg and Bremen.

9. Table III shows the average wholesale prices * per 100 maunds of Liverpool and other descriptions of salt at the port of Calcutta during each fortnight of the quarter :—

Secretary to the Govt of Bengal.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 28th February 1916.

Summary.—During the week under report light scattered showers fell in many parts of East Bengal and in a few places of North Bengal; elsewhere the fall was practically nil. The recent showers have been beneficial to the standing rabi crops and have also assisted agricultural operations. More rain, however, is needed. Sowing of jute and autumn paddy on low lands has begun in some districts. Harvesting of sugarcane is almost finished and that of rabi crops continues. Scarcity of fodder is increasing in Bankura. Cattle-disease is reported from six districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has slightly fallen as compared with that of the previous week.

J. H. KERR,
Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

ESTABLISHMENT.

The 3rd March 1916.

No. 27.—Mr. A. K. Taylor, Executive Engineer, Electrical Division, is appointed to officiate as Electric Inspector, Bengal, in addition to his own duties with effect from the afternoon of the 24th February 1916 and until further orders.

The 4th March 1916.

No. 28.—Babu Debendra Nath Sen Gupta, Assistant Engineer, First Calcutta Division, is granted privilege leave for two months, under article 260 of the Civil Service Regulations, with effect from the 7th March 1916 or such subsequent date as he may avail himself of it.

H. H. GREEN,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

The 7th March 1916.

No. 7.—Notification.—Whereas it appears to the Governor in Council that injury to the public health has arisen and may hereafter arise from the obstruction of the portion of the river, stream or natural drainage-course known by the names of Gobra Nala, Bhandar Dhan, and Suti Khal, in the district of Murshidabad, from the point where it intersects the pucca road from Jaiganj Ghat to Bhagwangola to its confluence with the Jalangi river below Bali, and that the said portion of the river, stream or natural drainage-course should, in future, be maintained as a drainage-channel:

Now, therefore, the Governor in Council is pleased, in exercise of the power conferred by section 40 of the Bengal Irrigation Act, 1876 (Bengal Act III of 1876), and in supersession of Revenue Department Notification, dated the 10th October 1882 (published at page 870 of the Calcutta Gazette of 18th idem), as amended by Notification, dated the 15th April 1883 (published at page 318 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 25th idem), to prohibit the formation of any bund or other obstruction to the free passage of drainage-water within the aforesaid portion of the river, stream or natural drainage-course hereby declared as a drainage-course, and to declare that the existing obstructions in the said portion of the river, stream or natural drainage-course shall be at once removed.

F. A. A. COWLEY,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

[Third publication.]

The 22nd February 1916.

No. 4.—Notification.—The following draft of rules which, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), and in supersession of Notification No. 108, dated the 26th February 1884 (published at pages 399-400 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 27th idem), as amended by Notification No. 11, dated the 16th November 1908, the Governor in Council intends to make for carrying out the provisions of the said Act, is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 25th March 1916, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Draft Rules.

1. All estimates for works or repairs or for maintenance of public embankments which are prepared under section 7 or section 47 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), shall include the estimated cost of all petty establishment employed for watching or guarding embankments and for working sluices.

2. (1) Such estimates shall also include such charges for directing and supervising establishment and for the use of tools and plant as may be directed by the Governor in Council from time to time.

(2) The said charges shall not exceed in all 26 per cent. on the estimated outlay on the works or repairs, exclusive of charges for the acquisition of land or for petty establishment. The charge for supervising establishment and tools and plant shall ordinarily be a consolidated one of 10 per cent. on the outlay on the works (excluding land and petty establishment), but if in any particular case it is desired to make a higher charge or to reduce or remit the charge altogether, a reference must be made to Government at the time when the estimate is prepared.

3. The Collector shall, previous to submitting a report to the Commissioner under section 11, 19 or 43 of the Act, obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Engineer, which shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

No notices regarding new works, the estimated cost of which exceeds Rs. 2,500, shall be published under section 9 of the Act, until the estimates, specifications and plans have received the approval of the Chief Engineer.

4. No estimate referred to in section 49 of the Act shall be transmitted to the Collector, until it has been countersigned by the Superintending Engineer, who shall be responsible that the repairs proposed to be executed are necessary, that it is proposed to execute them in the proper manner and that the rates entered in the estimate are fair and reasonable.

5. The Superintending Engineer shall, on the requisition of the Collector, furnish a written opinion on any work which it is proposed to execute under the Act, causing all necessary surveys to be made.

6. Where the Collector, under the last preceding rule, requires surveys to be made, he shall either cause the estimated cost of the same to be paid to the Engineer, or procure sanction, under the ordinary rules for the disbursement of public money, to the proposed expenditure. Such deposit or sanction shall provide for the salaries and allowances of the Engineers and Surveyors intended to be employed.

7. The Superintending Engineer shall, in any enquiry under section 51 of the Act, on receiving a requisition to that effect from the Collector, give his written opinion as to the boundaries of the lands affected by such works or repairs, and the extent to which they have been benefited or affected. This opinion shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

8. Notwithstanding that there is no express mention in section 52 of the Act of objections preferred before the Collector to the Engineer's accounts and certificate of expenses, on the ground that certain lands are not benefited by the works or repairs as specified in such certificate, the Collector shall entertain and consider such objections. As the disposal of such objections will often depend on professional enquiries, the Collector shall ordinarily consult the Engineer and, if necessary, the Superintending Engineer, before passing orders, and the substance of the reference to the Engineer, and of his reply shall form part of the record.

If, on such objection the Collector shall come to the conclusion that any alteration should be made in the certificate which has been signed by the Engineer, under section 51, he may at any time, before making an order charging or apportioning the amount under section 58 of the Act, make such alteration as provided in section 52.

9. When it appears likely that the ordinary procedure under the Act would be attended with grave and imminent danger to life and property, and proceedings are taken by the Collector, under section 25 of the Act, or by the Engineer, under section 29, the Collector shall make an immediate report to the Commissioner, and forward a copy thereof to the Superintending Engineer. In such cases the Commissioner shall lose no time in submitting a copy of the said report, with his opinion thereon, for the orders of Government,

10. All orders passed under section 31 of the Act shall be in writing, and the applicant shall be entitled to receive a copy of the same, free of charge, on application. The Engineer shall delegate to all Public Works Subdivisional Officers the power of receiving applications, under section 31 of the Act, for temporary roadways and temporary water-courses, but no person so appointed shall pass an order for the construction of a temporary water-course, unless he has been specially authorised to do so by the Superintending Engineer. Such authority shall specify the embankments in regard to which only this power is to be exercised. In all cases where an application for a temporary water-course is made to a person appointed by the Engineer, such application shall be submitted to the Engineer for transmission to the Collector. The Engineer, in forwarding applications under this section to the Collector, shall state in writing whether, in his opinion, they can be sanctioned without endangering the safety of the embankment.

11. All Public Works Subdivisional Officers shall be authorised to open or shut sluices under general rules to be issued by the Engineer, with the approval of the Collector. A copy of all rules made under this section shall be transmitted to the Superintending Engineer.

12. Any order to remove an embankment or obstruction, or to repair damage, passed under section 79 of the Act, shall be appealable to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies from the decision of the Magistrate who passes the order.

13. The Engineer shall submit to Government, through the Superintending Engineer, an annual report on the state of each Schedule D embankment in his charge on the 1st of April of each year. The report shall contain the following particulars:—

(a) the original length of the embankment;

(b) the length as maintained during the year;

(c) the area it protects;

(d) the floods during the year;

(e) how the embankment was affected by the floods of the year;

(f) the cost of its upkeep;

(g) whether there has been any encroachment on embankment land during the year; if in the affirmative, what steps have been taken to bring the offender to justice;

(h) if the crest of the embankment is sufficiently high to protect the lands within from floods in the river.

14. The Engineer in charge shall submit to Government annually, through the Superintending Engineer, a report with plans shewing what embankments, if any, have been erected or added to within any tract included in a prohibitory notification issued under section 6 of the Act.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.

The 4th March 1916.

No. 36 Marine.—The following Notification of the Government of India is republished for general information.

F. A. A. COWLEY,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

Delhi, the 15th January 1916.

No. 264—44-C.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 53 of the Native Passenger Ships Act, 1887 (X of 1887), the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following amendments shall be made in the rules published with the Notification of the Government of India in the Finance and Commerce Department, No. 1354, dated the 14th March 1889:—

For rule II (1) of the said rules, the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"II. (1) (a) Every ship which is engaged on a long voyage and which carries one hundred or more persons (including crew and passengers) shall, if she carry a Surgeon, have on board a supply of medicines and surgical appliances as specified in Schedule A annexed to these rules.

(b) Every ship which is engaged on a short voyage and which is licensed to carry 20 saloon and 800 other passengers or more shall, if she carry a Surgeon, have on board a supply of medicines and surgical appliances as specified in the said Schedule A.

(c) The supply of medicines and surgical appliances required to be on board a ship by clause (a) or clause (b), shall be kept in a surgery which shall have a superficial floor area of not less than 8 feet by 6 feet and shall be fitted with suitable racks and lockers, a table and a sink and an adequate water-supply.

(d) Every ship which is engaged on a long voyage, other than a ship referred to in clause (a), and every ship which is engaged on a short voyage other than a ship referred to in clause (b), shall carry a supply of medicines and surgical appliances, as specified in Schedule B annexed to these rules.

(e) The medical stores and surgical appliances kept on board every ship shall be inspected once at least in every year and more than 6 months from the date of the last inspection by the Port Health Officer, who shall, if he is satisfied that the provisions of these rules have been complied with, grant a certificate of correctness to the master of the ship."

2. After rule II (2) of the said rules the following shall be inserted, namely:—

"II. (3) The medical officer (if any) of every ship shall keep regularly from day to day throughout a voyage the following records in connection with his duties and shall, on arrival at every port, produce the same before the Port Health Officer, namely:—

(i) a medical diary of the principal events of the voyage, briefly and accurately recording all facts in connection with the medical history of the crew and the passengers including a record of any advice he may give to the master and of compliance with or neglect of such advice;

(ii) an Admission and Discharge book of every case brought under medical treatment in Form No. I in Schedule C, annexed to these rules; and (iii) a Register of deaths in Form No. II in the said Schedule C.

If the medical officer omits to keep the records as aforesaid or to produce the same before the Port Health Officer on arrival at every port he shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees."

3. For rule IV (i) of the said rules the following shall be substituted, namely :—

"IV. (1) Every ship shall be fitted with privy accommodation of at least 3 seats in the latrine and 2 stalls in the urinal for every 100 passengers or fraction thereof. Separate privy accommodation on the same scale shall also be provided for the crew. All such privies shall be sufficiently screened from public view, shall be readily accessible and available at all times for use, and, if not of the European style, shall consist of troughs of enamel ware, ferro concrete or other similar impermeable material and shall be provided with a suitable flushing arrangement."

NOTICE.

Examination of Compounders at the Dacca Medical School.

IT is hereby notified, for general information, that the next half-yearly examination for compounders will be held on the 17th April 1916, and subsequent days.

The examination will be conducted in accordance with Bengal Government Notifications Nos. 1410 and 1411 Medical, dated the 7th July 1913 :—

(a) The Examining Committee will consist of—

PRESIDENT :

Lieut.-Col. E. A. R. Newman, I.M.S.,
Superintendent, Medical School, Dacca.

MEMBERS :

Teacher of Anatomy.
Teacher of Midwifery.

(b) No person will be admitted to this examination unless he produces certificates as required by rules 9, 10, 11 and 12 of Government Notification No. 1410 Medical, dated the 7th July 1913.

(c) All male candidates must forward to the undersigned an examination fee of Rs. 5, at least one week before the commencement of examination; a fresh fee must be paid on each occasion that the candidate enters for the examination; but a candidate, who, after payment of the fee, is unable, through illness, to attend the examination, will be allowed, on producing a satisfactory medical certificate to that effect, to attend the next examination without payment of a fresh fee.

NOTE.—Women candidates are examined free of charge.

(d) The students of the compounder class of the Medical Schools at the end of the one year of study and the students of the Licentiate class of these schools, on the completion of their second year's course, will be allowed to appear at an optional examination, to be conducted by the Committee of Examiners notified above—in minor bandaging, preparation of antiseptic lotions and dressings, sterilization of dressings and instruments, and in all the minor duties of hospital work. No additional fee shall be charged for this optional examination.

This examination is also open to persons qualified for admission to the examination prescribed under the Rules for the grant of certificates to compounders, on production of a certificate that they have received instruction in a hospital or dispensary recognised by Government in minor bandaging, preparation of antiseptic lotions and dressings, sterilization of dressings and instruments, and in all the minor duties of hospital work. Such persons shall be required to pay a fee of Rs. 2-8 for this examination. But no fee will be required from a candidate who appears at the combined Compounders' and Dressership Examination and who has paid the fee of Rs. 5 prescribed in para. (c).

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt: and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or

the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

Caution when Approaching British Ports.

No. 46 (second publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1 of 1916), are republished :—

PART I.

CLOSING OF PORTS.

Former Notice.—No. 700 of 1915. (This Office No. 250 of 1915.)

(1) My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, having taken into consideration the fact that it may be necessary to forbid all entrance to certain ports of the Empire, this is to give Notice that on approaching the shores of the United Kingdom, or any of the ports or localities of the British Empire, referred to in Part III of this Notice, a sharp look-out should be kept for the signals described in the following paragraph, and for the vessels mentioned in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice, and the distinguishing and other signals made by them. In the event of such signals being displayed, the port or locality should be approached with great caution, as it may be apprehended that obstructions may exist.

(2) If entrance to a port is prohibited, three red vertical lights by night, or three red vertical balls by day, will be exhibited in some conspicuous position, in or near to its approach, which signals will also be shown by the vessels indicated in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice.

If these signals are displayed, vessels must either proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

(3) At all the ports or localities at home or abroad referred to in Part III of this Notice, search-lights are occasionally exhibited for exercise.

Instructions have been given to avoid directing moveable search-lights during practice on to vessels under way, but mariners are warned that great care should be taken to keep a sharp look-out for the signals indicated in paragraph (2) above, when search-lights are observed to be working.

PART II.

EXAMINATION SERVICE.

(4) In certain circumstances it is also necessary to take special measures to examine vessels desiring to enter the ports or localities at home or abroad, referred to in Part III of this Notice.

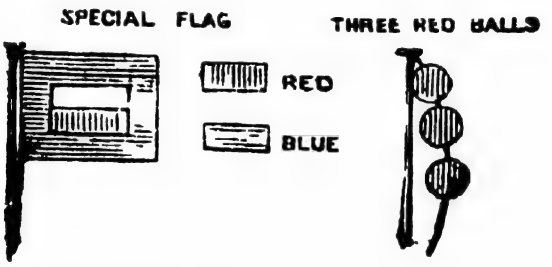
(5) In such case, vessels carrying the distinguishing flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7) will be charged with the duty of examining ships which desire to enter the ports and of allotting positions in which they shall anchor. If Government vessels, or vessels belonging to the local port authority, are found patrolling in the offing, merchant vessels are advised to communicate with such vessels with a view to obtaining information as to the course on which they should approach the Examination Anchorage. Such communication will not be necessary in cases where the pilot on board has already received this information from the local authorities.

(6) As the institution of the Examination Service at any port will never be publicly advertised, especial care should be taken in approaching the ports, by day or night, to keep a sharp look-out for any vessel carrying the flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7), and to be ready to "bring to" at once when hailed by her or warned by the firing of a gun or sound rocket.

In entering by night any of the ports mentioned in Part III, serious delay and risk will be avoided if four efficient all round lamps, two red and two white, are kept available for use.

(7) By day the distinguishing flags of the Examination Steamer will be a special flag (white and red horizontal surrounded by a blue border) and a blue ensign.

Also, three red vertical balls if the port is closed.



By night the steamer will carry :—

(a) Three red vertical lights if the port is closed.
(b) Three white vertical lights if the port is open.

The above lights will be carried in addition to the ordinary navigation lights, and will show an unbroken light around the horizon.

(8) Masters are warned that, when approaching a British port where the Examination Service is in force, they must have the distinguishing signal of their vessel ready to hoist immediately the Examination Steamer makes the signal.

(9) Masters are warned that, before attempting to enter any of these ports when the Examination Service is in force, they must in their own interests strictly obey all instructions given to them by the Examination Steamer. In the absence of any instructions from the Examination Steamer they must proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage," on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

Whilst at anchor in the Examination Anchorage, Masters are warned that they must not lower any boats (except to avoid accident), communicate with the shore, work cables, move the ship, or allow anyone to leave the ship, without permission from the Examination Steamer.

(10) In case of fog, Masters are enjoined to use the utmost care, and the Examination Anchorage itself should be approached with caution.

(11) Merchant vessels when approaching ports are especially cautioned against making use of private signals of any description, either by day or night: the use of them will render a vessel liable to be fired on.

(12) The pilots attached to the ports will be acquainted with the regulations to be followed.

PART IV.

SWEEPING OPERATIONS.

H.M. Vessels are constantly engaged in sweeping operations off ports in the United Kingdom.

Whilst so engaged, they work in pairs connected by a wire hawser, and are consequently hampered to a very considerable extent in their manœuvring powers.

With a view to indicating the nature of the work on which these vessels are engaged, they will show the following signals :—

A black ball at the foremast head and a similar ball at the yardarm, or where it can best be seen, on that side on which it is dangerous for vessels to pass.

For the public safety, all other vessels, whether steamers or sailing craft, must keep out of the way of vessels flying this signal, and should especially remember that it is dangerous to pass between the vessels of a pair.

Note.

RESOLUTION ON THE SURVEY AND SETTLEMENT REPORTS FOR THE YEAR ENDING 30TH SEPTEMBER 1915.

CALCUTTA, THE 29TH FEBRUARY 1916.

READ—

The Survey and Settlement Reports for the year ending 30th September 1915.

THE war affected adversely the progress of the operations of the Survey and Settlement Departments. With a view to economy in expenditure operations in the district of Bankura were postponed ; and the programme in all districts was appreciably curtailed. The collapse of the jute market immediately after the outbreak of the war interfered with the recovery of costs in the Eastern Bengal districts, while it was the indirect cause of a diminished demand for printed maps and khatians and of a decrease in the number of cases instituted in Settlement Courts in Eastern Bengal districts. The record-of-rights was finally published during the year in an area of 1,975 square miles against an area of 4,492 square miles in the previous year. The total area for which a record-of-rights has been completed in the Presidency is 17,027 square miles, and in 12,732 square miles it is under preparation, while an area of 34,360 square miles remains to be dealt with.

2. In 1912 the survey operations and map work of the Provinces of Bengal and Assam were placed as a tentative measure under the control of Major F. C. Hirst, I.A., as Director of Surveys of the two Provinces. The inconvenience of this arrangement, however, soon become apparent, and steps were taken during the year for the formation of separate departments for each Province. The reconstitution of the Bengal Survey Department was effected on the 4th December 1915.

3. According to arrangements previously made with the Surveyor-General, the Imperial Standard Mapping Section was placed under the Director of Surveys for the preparation of standard maps of Bengal from data supplied by recent cadastral surveys. The work started late in the year with a temporary establishment and such draftsmen as were available from the Province of Bihar and Orissa where the work is approaching completion.

4. Traverse survey was continued in the districts of Rajshahi and Midnapore, was begun in Tippera, Jessore and Bankura, and was completed in Noakhali and the diara blocks of Mymensingh. In spite of difficulties in carrying out measurements across wide sea channels in Tippera and Noakhali, and in spite of the scattered nature of the work in Midnapore, the outturn of district surveys amounted to 4,074 square miles, against 3,630 and 3,562 square miles in the two previous years. The incidence of cost-rates, although slightly higher in districts newly taken up, in diaras, and in Midnapore, did not exceed the estimated rates.

5. An area of about 500 square miles in the main Ganges Diara between Rajshahi and Faridpur was traversed for the Settlement Department. The Survey Department was also engaged in carrying out numerous jobs of a miscellaneous character, including a considerable programme in Calcutta and its suburbs for the Improvement Trust.

6. A Committee, consisting of the Principal of the Sibpur Civil Engineering College, the Director of Surveys, and the Head Master of the Dacca School of Engineering, was appointed in 1914 to enquire into the subject of survey education in Bengal. They were asked to draw up a revised syllabus for survey classes, to suggest the schools in which the classes should be held, to advise generally as to staff and other details, and to make proposals for a scheme of periodical inspection and examinations. The Committee's report was received during the year and is under the consideration of Government.

Several students from the Government Survey School at Mainamati near Comilla were provided with appointments in the Bengal Traverse Party in the cold weather of 1914-15. The Governor in Council regrets to observe that their work was not always satisfactory and trusts that the Principal will be able to convince his students that practical work in the field is the object for which they undergo training. With the improvements in methods of teaching lately introduced, it is hoped that the school will ultimately be a reliable recruiting ground for Traverse Surveyors of the Department and will also be of use in the training of Collectorate kanungos.

7. Cadastral survey and the preparation of record-of-rights were in progress in nineteen districts. The area cadastrally surveyed in major operations was 3,602 square miles, and preliminary records were written for 3,598 square miles, against 3,262 and 3,360 square miles, respectively, of the previous year. Records were attested for 3,234 square miles and finally published for 1,866 square miles. In minor operations 55 square miles were cadastrally surveyed and the records of 69 square miles were attested and of 109 square miles finally published. A considerable amount of diara resumption and resettlement of land revenue was accomplished in the course of these operations, both major and minor, mostly in Dacca, Bakarganj, Faridpur, and Noakhali.

8. In reviewing the progress made in the several major operations the Director of Land Records has compared the actual progress and expenditure with the revised programmes and estimates, as instructed in last year's Resolution. The Governor in Council finds that, except in the case of Midnapore district, which will be the subject of careful enquiry, there is not yet reason to believe that the latest estimates will be much exceeded; but the report shows that unforeseen incidents, such as the curtailment of the programme for the sake of economy, and the delay in recovery of costs on account of the fall in the price of jute, may upset estimates prepared for normal conditions, and that the variety in the numbers of plots and interests per square mile within the same district, and in the intensity of disputes are factors which make strictly accurate estimates impossible before work has been started.

In Jalpaiguri and Faridpur the settlement proceedings will be closed on 29th February 1916. In both of these districts the state of the jute trade has caused delay in recovery of costs, which has retarded completion of the operations: in Faridpur no appreciable excess over the sanctioned estimate is expected, but in Jalpaiguri the excess is likely to be about Rs. 40,000.

In Midnapore the programmes of cadastral survey, khanapuri, and attestation have been completed but the estimated cost-rate has been exceeded especially in attestation, where the excess is due to an unexpectedly large number of plots and interests per square mile. The savings in expenditure, as compared with the estimates, are more than counterbalanced by the arrears in janch (final scrutiny). The Governor in Council desires that the question of excess over the total estimate shall form the subject of full enquiry in the current year.

Apart from case work which was stopped for economy and recovery which was affected by the jute crisis the progress in Dacca was satisfactory, and the expenditure was well within the estimate. The major portion of the programme has been completed in this district.

In Mymensingh cadastral survey and khanapuri have been completed: complexity of work has delayed bujharat (field-to-field verification of map and record) and attestation, and has increased the cost of attestation. The savings in the estimate will be absorbed by the completion of areas, but no large divergence from the sanctioned estimates is expected.

The year's programme was nearly completed in Rajshahi, except for field bujharat and janch, which are in arrears owing to the number of plots and interests encountered. It is hoped that savings in the diara area will counterbalance the high cost of bujharat and prevent the total estimate from being exceeded.

In Tippera and Noakhali, where operations began during the year under review, a reduction in the estimated area due to diluvion has kept the total cost below that estimated, while the cost-rates per square mile have been slightly exceeded.

9. The report contains accounts of the relations between landlords and tenants in the districts of Rajshahi and Noakhali where settlement operations have not been long in progress. The Settlement Officer of Rajshahi tells a story of habitual and organized oppression which has reduced the raiyats to a state of subservience. His account presents a striking contrast with that which is given of the raiyats of Noakhali, where it is reported that abwabs and enhancements of rent are rarely taken, and the raiyats are prosperous and law-abiding.

10. Settlement records continue to be used freely in all departments of Government, including the Civil Courts, a result, no doubt, partly due to the continuous accession to the general departments of the administration of officers, who have either seen service in surveys and settlements or passed through a course of training at the annual camp. The rapidly growing appreciation of settlement records can be gauged by the fact that in Bakarganj over 17,500 applications for settlement records and connected papers were received during the year.

In accordance with the orders of the Secretary of State, the proposal for the maintenance of land records has been abandoned for the present, mainly on account of the absence of a suitable local agency.

11. Major F. C. Hirst, I.A., Director of Surveys, was on privilege leave and special duty from October to April, during which period his duties were carried on successively by Captain A. H. Gwyn, I.A., and Mr. J. C. Nixon, I.C.S. Mr. M. C. McAlpin, I.C.S., was in charge of the Department of Land Records throughout the year. The two departments worked harmoniously with the usual high standard of efficiency. The thanks of His Excellency in Council are due to these officers for the successful administration of their respective departments. Government have much pleasure in acknowledging the energy, ability, and resourcefulness in organization displayed by the officers in charge of major operations. The good services of the numerous officers, whose names are mentioned in the concluding chapters of the two reports, are also noted.

ORDER.—Ordered that this Resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette and that a copy of it, together with copies of the two reports, be submitted to the Government of India.

By order of the Governor in Council,

L. BIRLEY,

Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 6th March 1916.

Summary.—No rain fell during the week. The preparation of lands for autumn crops is in progress, but rain is wanted to facilitate the operation. The sowing of jute and autumn paddy has commenced in lowlands in certain districts. Harvesting of rabi crops continues and that of sugarcane is approaching completion. The prospects of standing crops are generally reported to be fair. Scarcity of fodder is increasing in Bankura. Cattle-disease is reported from eight districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has slightly fallen as compared with that of the previous week.

IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

The 22nd February 1916.

No. 4.—Notification.—The following draft of rules which, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 90 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), and in supersession of Notification No. 108, dated the 26th February 1884 (published at pages 399-400 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 27th idem), as amended by Notification No. 11, dated the 16th November 1908, the Governor in Council intends to make for carrying out the provisions of the said Act, is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 25th March 1916, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Draft Rules.

1. All estimates for works or repairs or for maintenance of public embankments which are prepared under section 7 or section 47 of the Bengal Embankment Act, 1882 (Bengal Act II of 1882), shall include the estimated cost of all petty establishment employed for watching or guarding embankments and for working sluices.

2. (1) Such estimates shall also include such charges for directing and supervising establishment and for the use of tools and plant as may be directed by the Governor in Council from time to time.

(2) The said charges shall not exceed in all 26 per cent. on the estimated outlay on the works or repairs, exclusive of charges for the acquisition of land or for petty establishment. The charge for supervising establishment and tools and plant shall ordinarily be a consolidated one of 10 per cent. on the outlay on the works (excluding land and petty establishment), but if in any particular case it is desired to make a higher charge or to reduce or remit the charge altogether, a reference must be made to Government at the time when the estimate is prepared.

3. The Collector shall, previous to submitting a report to the Commissioner under section 11, 19 or 43 of the Act, obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Engineer, which shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

No notices regarding new works, the estimated cost of which exceeds Rs. 2,500, shall be published under section 9 of the Act, until the estimates, specifications and plans have received the approval of the Chief Engineer.

4. No estimate referred to in section 49 of the Act shall be transmitted to the Collector, until it has been countersigned by the Superintending Engineer, who shall be responsible that the repairs proposed to be executed are necessary, that it is proposed to execute them in the proper manner and that the rates entered in the estimate are fair and reasonable.

5. The Superintending Engineer shall, on the requisition of the Collector, furnish a written opinion on any work which it is proposed to execute under the Act, causing all necessary surveys to be made.

6. Where the Collector, under the last preceding rule, requires surveys to be made, he shall either cause the estimated cost of the same to be paid to the Engineer, or procure sanction, under the ordinary rules for the disbursement of public money, to the proposed expenditure. Such deposit or sanction shall provide for the salaries and allowances of the Engineers and Surveyors intended to be employed.

7. The Superintending Engineer shall, in any enquiry under section 51 of the Act, on receiving a requisition to that effect from the Collector, give his written opinion as to the boundaries of the lands affected by such works or repairs, and the extent to which they have been benefited or affected. This opinion shall form part of the record of proceedings in the case.

8. Notwithstanding that there is no express mention in section 52 of the Act of objections preferred before the Collector to the Engineer's accounts and certificate of expenses, on the ground that certain lands are not benefited by the works or repairs as specified in such certificate, the Collector shall entertain and consider such objections. As the disposal of such objections will often depend on professional enquiries, the Collector shall ordinarily consult the Engineer and, if necessary, the Superintending Engineer, before passing orders, and the substance of the reference to the Engineer, and of his reply shall form part of the record.

If, on such objection the Collector shall come to the conclusion that any alteration should be made in the certificate which has been signed by the Engineer, under section 51, he may at any time, before making an order charging or apportioning the amount under section 58 of the Act, make such alteration as provided in section 52.

9. When it appears likely that the ordinary procedure under the Act would be attended with grave and imminent danger to life and property, and proceedings are taken by the Collector, under section 25 of the Act, or by the Engineer, under section 29, the Collector shall make an immediate report to the Commissioner, and forward a copy thereof to the Superintending Engineer. In such cases the Commissioner shall lose no time in submitting a copy of the said report, with his opinion thereon, for the orders of Government,

10. All orders passed under section 31 of the Act shall be in writing, and the applicant shall be entitled to receive a copy of the same, free of charge, on application. The Engineer shall delegate to all Public Works Subdivisional Officers the power of receiving applications, under section 31 of the Act, for temporary roadways and temporary water-courses, but no person so appointed shall pass an order for the construction of a temporary water-course, unless he has been specially authorised to do so by the Superintending Engineer. Such authority shall specify the embankments in regard to which only this power is to be exercised. In all cases where an application for a temporary water-course is made to a person appointed by the Engineer, such application shall be submitted to the Engineer for transmission to the Collector. The Engineer, in forwarding applications under this section to the Collector, shall state in writing whether, in his opinion, they can be sanctioned without endangering the safety of the embankment.

11. All Public Works Subdivisional Officers shall be authorised to open or shut sluices under general rules to be issued by the Engineer, with the approval of the Collector. A copy of all rules made under this section shall be transmitted to the Superintending Engineer.

12. Any order to remove an embankment or obstruction, or to repair damage, passed under section 79 of the Act, shall be appealable to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies from the decision of the Magistrate who passes the order.

13. The Engineer shall submit to Government, through the Superintending Engineer, an annual report on the state of each Schedule D embankment in his charge on the 1st of April of each year. The report shall contain the following particulars:—

(a) the original length of the embankment;
(b) the length as maintained during the year;
(c) the area it protects;
(d) the floods during the year;
(e) how the embankment was affected by the floods of the year;
(f) the cost of its upkeep;
(g) whether there has been any encroachment on embankment land during the year; if in the affirmative, what steps have been taken to bring the offender to justice;
(h) if the crest of the embankment is sufficiently high to protect the lands within from floods in the river.

14. The Engineer in charge shall submit to Government annually, through the Superintending Engineer, a report with plans shewing what embankments, if any, have been erected or added to within any tract included in a prohibitory notification issued under section 6 of the Act.

CUSTOMS.

Delhi, the 11th March 1916.

No. 1898-W.—The following Order in Council is published for general information :—

AT THE COUNCIL CHAMBER, WHITEHALL.

The 28th day of January 1916.

BY THE LORDS OF HIS MAJESTY'S MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL.

WHEREAS it is provided by section 2 of the Customs (Exportation Prohibition) Act, 1914, that any Proclamation or Order in Council made under section 8 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879, as amended by the Act now in recital, may, whilst a state of war exists, be varied or added to by an Order made by the Lords of the Council on the recommendation of the Board of Trade :

And whereas it is provided by section 2 of the Customs (Exportation Restriction) Act, 1914, that any Proclamation made under section 1 of the Exportation of Arms Act, 1900, may, whether the Proclamation was made before or after the passing of the Act now in recital, be varied or added to, whilst a state of war exists, by an Order made by the Lords of the Council on the recommendation of the Board of Trade :

And whereas by a Proclamation, dated the 28th day of July 1915, and made under section 8 of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879, and section 1 of the Exportation of Arms Act, 1900, and section 1 of the Customs (Exportation Prohibition) Act, 1914, the exportation from the United Kingdom of certain articles to certain or all destinations was prohibited :

And whereas by subsequent Orders of Council the said Proclamation was amended and added to in certain particulars :

And whereas there was this day read at the Board a recommendation from the Board of Trade to the following effect :—

That the Proclamation, dated the 28th day of July 1915, as amended and added to by subsequent Orders of Council, should be further amended by making the following amendments in and additions to the same :—

(1) That the exportation of the following goods should be prohibited to all destinations :—

Cotton rags ;

Linen rags ;

Waste paper.

(2) That the heading "Railway waggons" in the list of goods the exportation of which is prohibited to all destinations abroad other than British Possessions and Protectorates should be deleted, and there be substituted therefor the heading :—

Railway waggons and their component parts.

(3) That the exportation of the following goods should be prohibited to all foreign countries in Europe and on the Mediterranean and Black Seas, other than France, Russia (except through Baltic ports), Italy, Spain and Portugal :—

Canes and sticks, unmounted, whether for basket making or not;
Cordage and twine of Manila hemp
Europhen;
Files;
Pocket lamp cases and cases fitted with bulbs but not containing batteries;
Rum and imitation rum.

Now, therefore, Their Lordships, having taken the said recommendation into consideration, are pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the same be approved.

Whereof the Commissioners of His Majesty's Customs and Excise, the Director of the War Trade Department, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

No. 271.—The following extracts are published for general information :—

Second Supplement, dated the 6th January 1916, to the "London Gazette" of the 4th January 1916.

War Office,
6th January 1916.

The following despatch has been received by the Secretary of State for War from General Sir Ian Hamilton, G.C.B.

1, Hyde Park Gardens,
London, W., 11th December 1915.

MY LORD—

For the understanding of the operations about to be described, I must first set forth the situation as it appeared to me early in July.

The three days' battle of the 6th—8th May had shown that neither of my forces, northern or southern, were strong enough to fight their way to the Narrows. On the 10th of May I had cabled asking that two fresh divisions might be sent me to enable me to press on and so prevent my attack degenerating into trench warfare. On the 17th of May I again cabled, saying that if we were going to be left to face Turkey on our own resources we should require two Army Corps additional to my existing forces at the Dardanelles. The 52nd (Lowland) Division had been sent me, but between their dates of despatch and arrival Russia had given up the idea of co-operating from the coast of the Black Sea. Thereby several Turkish divisions were set free for the Dardanelles, and the battle of the 4th June, locally successful as it was, found us just as weak, relatively, as we had been a month earlier.

During June Your Lordship became persuaded of the bearing of these facts, and I was promised three regular divisions plus the infantry of two Territorial divisions. The advance guard of these troops was due to reach Mudros by the 10th of July; by the 10th of August their concentration was to be complete.

Eliminating the impracticable, I had already narrowed down the methods of employing these fresh forces to one of the following four:—

(a) Every man to be thrown on to the southern sector of the Peninsula to force a way forward to the Narrows.

(d) Reinforcement of the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps, combined with a landing in Suvla Bay. Then with one strong push to capture Hill 305, and, working from that dominating point, to grip the waist of the Peninsula.

As to (a) I rejected that course—

(1) Because there were limits to the numbers which could be landed and deployed in one confined area.

(2) Because the capture of Krithia could no longer be counted upon to give us Achi Baba, an entirely new system of works having lately appeared upon the slopes of that mountain—works so planned that even if the enemy's western flank was turned and driven back from the coast the central and eastern portions of the mountain could still be maintained as a bastion to Kilid Bahr.

(3) Because, if I tried to disengage myself both from Krithia and Achi Baba by landing due west of Kilid Bahr, my troops would be exposed to artillery fire from Achi Baba, the Olive Grove, and Kilid Bahr itself; the enemy's large reserves were too handy; there were not fair chances of success.

As to (b), although much of the Asiatic coast had now been wired and entrenched, the project was still attractive. Thereby the Turkish forces on the peninsula would be weakened; our beaches at Cape Helles would be freed from Asiatic shells; the threat to the enemy's sea communications was obvious. But when I descended into detail I found that the expected reinforcements would not run to a double operation. I mean that, unless I could make a thorough, whole-hearted attack on the enemy in the peninsula I should reap no advantage in that theatre from the transference of the Turkish peninsula troops to reinforce Asia, whereas, if the British forces landed in Asia were not strong enough in themselves seriously to threaten Chanak, the Turks for their part would not seriously relax their grip upon the peninsula.

To cut the land communications of the whole of the Turkish peninsular army, as in (c), was a better scheme on paper than on the spot. The Naval objections appeared to my co-adjutor, Vice-Admiral de Robeck, well-nigh insurmountable. Already owing to submarine dangers, all reinforcements, ammunition and sppplies had to be brought up from Mudros to Helles or Anzac by night in fleet-sweepers and trawlers. A new landing near Bulair would have added another 50 miles to the course such small craft must cover, thus placing too severe a strain upon the capacities of the flotilla. The landing promised special hazards owing to the difficulty of securing the transports and covering ships from submarine attack. Ibrije has a bad beach, and the distance to Enos, the only point suitable to a disembarkation on a large scale, was so great that the enemy would have had time to organize a formidable opposition from his garrisons in Thrace. Four divisions at least would be required to overcome such opposition. These might now be found; but, even so, and presupposing every other obstacle overcome, it was by no manner of means certain that the Turkish army on the peninsula would thereby be brought to sue for terms, or that the Narrows would thereby be opened to the Fleet. The enemy would still be able to work supplies across the Straits from Chanak. The swiftness of the current, the shallow draft of the Turkish lighters, the guns of the forts, made it too difficult even for our dauntless submarine commanders to paralyse movement across these land-locked waters. To achieve that purpose I must bring my artillery fire to bear both on the land and water communications of the enemy.

This brings me to (d), the storming of that dominating height, Hill 305, with the capture of Maidos and Gaba Tepe as its sequel.

From the very first I had hoped that by landing a force under the heights of Sari Bair we should be able to strangle the Turkish communications to the southwards, whether by land or sea, and so clear the Narrows for the Fleet. Owing to the enemy's superiority, both in numbers and in position; owing to under-estimates of the strength of the original entrenchments prepared and sited under German direction; owing to the constant dwindling of the units of my force through wastage; owing also to the intricacy and difficulty of the terrain, these hopes had not hitherto borne fruit. But they were well founded. So much at least had clearly enough been demonstrated by the desperate and costly nature of the Turkish attacks. The Australians and New Zealanders had rooted themselves in very near to the vitals of the enemy. By their tenacity and courage they still held open the doorway from which one strong thrust forward might give us command of the Narrows.

From the naval point of view the auspices were also favourable. Suvla Bay was but one mile further from Mudros than Anzac, and its possession would ensure us a submarine-proof base and a harbour good against gales, excepting those from the south-west. There were, as might be expected, some special difficulties to be overcome—the broken, intricate country—the lack of water—the consequent anxious supply questions. Of these it can only be said that a bad country is better than an entrenched country, and that supply and water problems may be countered by careful preparation.

Before a man of the reinforcements had arrived my mind was made up as to their employment, and by means of a vigorous offensive from Anzac, combined with a surprise landing to the north of it, I meant to try and win through to Maidos, leaving behind me a well-protected line of communications starting from the bay of Suvla.

Another point which had to be fixed in advance was the date. The new troops would gain in fighting value if they could first be given a turn in the trenches. So much was clear. But the relief of the troops already holding those trenches would have been a long and difficult task for the Navy, and time was everything, seeing that everywhere the enemy was digging in as fast as he possibly could dig. Also, where large numbers of troops were to be smuggled into Anzac and another large force was to land by surprise at Suvla, it was essential to eliminate the moon. Unless the plunge could be taken by the second week in August, the whole venture must be postponed for a month. The dangers of such delay were clear. To realize them I had only to consider how notably my prospects would have been bettered, had these same reinforcements arrived in time to enable me to anticipate the moon of July.

Place and date having shaped themselves, the intervening period had to be filled in with as much fighting as possible. First, to gain ground; secondly, to maintain the moral ascendancy which my troops had by this time established; thirdly, to keep the enemy's eyes fixed rather upon Helles than Anzac.

Working out my ammunition allowance, I found I could accumulate just enough high explosive shell to enable me to deliver one serious attack per each period of three weeks. I was thus limited to a single effort on the large scale, plus a prescribed unceasing offensive routine, with bombing, sniping and mining as its methods.

The action of the 12th and 13th of July was meant to be a sequel to the action of the 28th June. That advance had driven back the Turkish right on to their second main system of defence just south of Krithia.

But, on my centre and right, the enemy still held their forward system of trenches, and it was my intention on the 12th July to seize the remaining trenches of this foremost system from the sea at the mouth of the Kereves Dere to the main Sedd-el-Bahr-Krithia road, along a front of some 2,000 yards.

On our right the attack was to be entrusted to the French Corps; on the right centre to the 52nd (Lowland) Division. On the 52nd Division's front the operation was planned to take place in two phases: our right was to attack in the morning, our left in the afternoon. Diversions by the 29th Division on the left of the southern section and at Anzac were to take place on the same day, so as to prevent the enemy's reserves from reinforcing the real point of attack.

At 7-35 A.M., after a heavy bombardment, the troops, French and Scottish, dashed out of their trenches and at once captured two lines of enemy trenches. Pushing forward with fine élan the 1st Division of the French Corps completed the task assigned to it by carrying the whole of the Turkish forward system of works, namely, the line of trenches skirting the lower part of the Kereves Dere. Further to the left the 2nd French Division and our 155th Brigade maintained the two lines of trenches they had gained. But on the left of the 155th Brigade the 4th Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers, pressed on too eagerly. They not only carried the third line of trenches, but charged on up the hill and beyond the third line, then advanced indeed until they came under the "feu de barrage" of the French artillery. Nothing could live under so cruel a cross fire from friend and foe, so the King's Own Scottish Borderers were forced to fall back with heavy losses to the second line of enemy trenches which they had captured in their first rush.

During this fighting telephone wires from forward positions were cut by enemy's shell fire, and here and there in the elaborate network of trenches numbers of Turks were desperately resisting to the last. Thus, though the second line of captured trenches continued to be held as a whole, much confused fighting ensued: there were retirements in parts of the line, reserves were rapidly being used up, and generally the situation was anxious and uncertain. But the best way of clearing it up seemed to be to deliver the second phase of the attack by the 157th Brigade just as it had originally been arranged. Accordingly, after a preliminary bombardment, the 157th Brigade rushed forward under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and splendidly carried the whole of the enemy trenches allotted as their objective. Here, then, our line had advanced some 400 yards, while the 155th Brigade and the 2nd French Division had advanced between 200 and 300 yards. At 6 P.M., the 52nd Division was ordered to make the line good; it seemed to be fairly in our grasp.

All night long determined counter-attacks, one after another, were repulsed by the French and the 155th Brigade, but about 7-30 A.M., the right of the 157th Brigade gave way before a party of bombers, and our grip upon the enemy began to weaken.

I therefore decided that three battalions of the Royal Naval Division should reinforce a fresh attack to be made that afternoon, 13th July, on such portions of our original objectives as remained in the enemy's hands. This second attack was a success. The 1st French Division pushed their right down to the mouth of the Kereves Dere; the 2nd French Division attacked the trenches they had failed to take on the preceding day; the Nelson Battalion, on the left of the Royal Naval Division attack, valiantly advanced and made good, well supported by the artillery of the French. The Portsmouth Battalion, pressing on too far, fell into precisely the same error at precisely the same spot as did the 4th King's Own Scottish Borderers on the 12th, an over-impetuosity which cost them heavy losses.

The 1/5th Royal Scots Fusiliers, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel J. B. Pollok-McCall; the 1/7th Royal Scots, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel W. C. Peebles; the 1/5th King's Own Scottish Borderers, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel W. J. Miller; and the 1/6th Highland Light Infantry, commanded by Major J. Anderson, are mentioned as having specially distinguished themselves in this engagement.

Generally, the upshot of the attack was this. On our right and on the French left two lines had been captured, but in neither case was the third, or last line of the system in their hands. Elsewhere a fine feat of arms had been accomplished, and a solid and enduring advance had been achieved giving us far the best sited line for defence with much the best field for machine-gun and rifle fire we had hitherto obtained upon the peninsula.

A machine-gun and 200 prisoners were captured by the French; the British took a machine-gun and 329 prisoners. The casualties in the French Corps were not heavy, though it is with sorrow that I have to report the mortal wound of General Masnou, commanding the 1st Division. Our own casualties were a little over 3,000; those of the enemy about 5,000.

On 17th July Lieutenant-General Hunter Weston, commanding the 8th Corps, left the peninsula for a few days' rest, and, to my very deep regret was subsequently invalided home. I have already drawn attention to his invincible self-confidence, untiring energy and trained ability.

As I was anxious to give the Commander of the new troops all the local experience possible, I appointed Lieutenant-General Hon. Sir Frederick Stopford, whose own Corps were now assembling at Mudros, temporarily to succeed Lieutenant-General Hunter Weston, but on July 24th when General Stopford had to set to work with his own Corps, Major-General W. Douglas, General Officer Commanding 42nd Division, took over temporary command of the 8th Corps; while Major-General W. R. Marshall, General Officer Commanding 87th Brigade assumed temporary command of the 42nd Division.

Only one other action need be mentioned before coming to the big operations of August. On the extreme right of Anzac the flank of a work called Tasmania Post was threatened by the extension of a Turkish trench. The task of capturing this trench was entrusted to the 3rd Australian Brigade. After an artillery bombardment, mines were to be fired, whereupon four columns of 50 men each were to assault and occupy specified lengths of the trench. The regiment supplying the assaulting columns was the 11th Australian Infantry Battalion.

At 10-15 P.M. on 31st July the bombardment was opened. Ten minutes later and the mines were duly fired. The four assaulting parties dashed forwarded at once, crossed our own barbed wire on planks, and were into the craters before the whole of the débris had fallen. Total casualties: 11 killed and 74 wounded; Turkish killed, 100.

By the time this action was fought a large proportion of my reinforcements had arrived, and, on the same principle which induced me to put General Stopford in temporary command at Helles, I relieved the war-worn 29th Division at the same place by the 13th Division under Major-General Shaw. The experiences here gained, in looking after themselves, in forgetting the thousand and one details of peace soldiering and in grasping the two or three elementary rules of conduct in war soldiering, were, it turned out, to be of priceless advantage to the 13th Division throughout the heavy fighting of the following month.

And now it was time to determine a date for the great venture. The moon would rise on the morning of the 7th at about 2 A.M. A day or two previously the last reinforcements, the 53rd and 54th Divisions, were due to arrive. The first day of the attack was fixed for the 6th of August.

Once the date was decided a certain amount of ingenuity had to be called into play so as to divert the attention of the enemy from my main strategical conception. This—I repeat for the sake of clearness—was:—

(1) To break out with a rush from Anzac and cut off the bulk of the Turkish Army from land communication with Constantinople.

(2) To gain such a command for my artillery as to cut off the bulk of the Turkish Army from sea traffic whether with Constantinople or with Asia.

(3) Incidentally, to secure Suvla Bay as a winter base for Anzac and all the troops operating in the northern theatre.

My schemes for hoodwinking the Turks fell under two heads: First, strategical diversons meant to draw away enemy reserves not yet committed to the peninsula. Secondly, tactical diversions meant to hold up enemy reserves already on the peninsula. Under the first heading came a surprise landing by a force of 300 men on the northern shore of the Gulf of Xeros; demonstrations by French ships opposite Mitylene along the Syrian coast; concentration at Mitylene; inspections at Mitylene by the Admiral and myself; making to order of a whole set of maps of Asia and Egypt, as well as secret service work, most of which before fruit. Amongst the tactical diversions were a big containing attack at Helles Soundings, registration of guns, etc., by Monitors between Gaba Tepe and Kum Tepe. An attack to be carried out by Anzac on Lone Pine trenches, which lay in front of their right wing and as far distant as the local terrain would admit from the scene of the real battle. Thanks entirely to the reality and vigour which the Navy and the troops threw into them, each one of these ruses was, it so turned out, entirely successful with the result that the Turks, despite their excellent spy system, were caught completely off their guard at dawn on the 7th of August.

Having settled upon the manner and time of the diversions, orders had to be issued for the main operation. And here I must pause a moment to draw your Lordship's attention to the extraordinary complexity of the staff work caused by the unique distribution of my forces. Within the narrow confines of the positions I held on the peninsula it was impossible to concentrate even as much as one-third of the fresh troops about to be launched to the attack. Nor could Mudros and Imbros combined absorb the whole of the remainder. The strategic concentration which precedes a normal battle had in my case to be a very wide dispersion. Thus, of the forces destined for my offensive, on the day before the battle, part were at Anzac, part at Imbros, part at Mudros, and part at Mitylene. These last three detachments were separated respectively by 14, 60 and 120 miles of sea from the arena into which they were simultaneously to appear. To ensure the punctual arrival of all these masses of inexperienced troops at the right moment and spot, together with their material, munitions, stores, supplies, water, animals and vehicles, was a prodigious undertaking demanding not only competence, but self-confidence; and I will say for my General Staff that I believe the clearness and completeness of their orders for this concentration and landing will hereafter be studied as models in military academies. The need for economy in sea transport, the awkwardness and restriction of open beaches, the impossibility of landing guns, animals or vehicles rapidly—all these made it essential to create a special, separate organisation for every single unit taking part in the adventure. A pack mule corps to supply 80,000 men had also to be organised for that specific purpose until such time as other transport could be landed.

As to water, that element of itself was responsible for a whole chapter of preparations. An enormous quantity had to be collected secretly, and as secretly stowed away at Anzac, where a high-level reservoir had to be built, having a holding capacity of 30,000 gallons, and fitted out with a regular system of pipes and distribution tanks. A stationary engine was brought over from Egypt to fill that reservoir. Petroleum tins, with a carrying capacity of 80,000 gallons were got together, and fixed up with handles, etc., but the collision of the "Moorgate" with another vessel delayed the arrival of large numbers of these just as a breakdown in the stationary engine upset for a while the well-laid plan of the high-level reservoir. But Anzac was ever resourceful in face of misadventures, and when the inevitable accidents arose it was not with folded hands that they were met.

Turning to Suvla Bay, it was believed that good wells and springs existed both in the Biyuk, Anafarta Valley and in Suvla Plain. But nothing so vital could possibly be left to hearsay, and although, as it turned out, our information was perfectly correct, yet the War Office were asked to despatch with each reinforcing division water receptacles for pack transport at the rate of half a gallon per man.

The sheet-anchor on which hung the whole of these elaborate schemes was the Navy. One tiny flaw in the perfect mutual trust and confidence animating the two services would have wrecked the whole enterprise. Experts at a distance may have guessed as much; it was self-evident to the rawest private on the spot. But with men like Vice-Admiral de Robeck, Commodore Roger Keyes, Rear-Admiral Christian and Captain F. H. Mitchell at our backs, we soldiers were secured against any such risk, and it will be seen how perfect was the precision the sailors put into their job.

The hour was now approaching, and I waited for it with as much confidence as is possible, when to the inevitable uncertainties of war are to be added those of the weather. Apart from feints, the first blow was to be dealt in the southern zone.

In that theatre I had my own Poste de Commandement. But upon the 6th of August attacks in the south were only to form a subsidiary part of one great concerted attack. Anzac was to diliver the knock-down blow; Helles and Suvla were complementary operations. Were I to commit myself at the outset to any one of these three theatres, I must lose my sense of proportion. Worse, there being no lateral communication between them as soon as I landed at one I was cut off from present touch with both of the others. At Imbros I was 45 minutes from Helles, 40 minutes from Anzac, and 50 minutes from Suvla. Imbros was the centre of the cable system, and thence I could follow each phase of the triple attack and be ready with my two divisions of reserve to throw in reinforcements where they seemed most to be required. Therefore I decided to follow the opening moves from General Headquarters.

At Helles the attack of the 6th was directed against 1,200 yards of the Turkish front opposite our own right and right centre, and was to be carried out by the 88th Brigade of the 29th Division. Two small Turkish trenches enfilading the main advance had, if possible, to be captured simultaneously, an affair which was entrusted to the 42nd Division.

After bombardment the infantry assaulted at 3-50 P.M. On the left large sections of the enemy's line were carried, but on our centre and right the Turks were encountered in masses, and the attack, pluckily and perseveringly as it was pressed, never had any real success. The 1st Battalion, Essex Regiment, in particular forced their way into the crowded enemy trench opposite them, despite the most determined resistance, but, once in, were subjected to the heaviest musketry fire from both flanks, as well as in reverse, and were shattered by showers of bombs. Two separate resolute attacks were made by the 42nd Division, but both of them recoiled in face of the unexpected volume of fire developed by the Turks.

After dark officer's patrols were sent up to ascertain the exact position of affairs. Heavy Turkish counter-attacks were being pressed against such portions of the line we still retained. Many of our men fought it out where they stood to the last, but by nightfall none of the enemy's line remained in our possession.

Our set-back was in no wise the fault of the troops. That ardour which only dashed itself to pièces against the enemy's strong entrenchments and numerous, stubborn defenders on the 6th of August would, a month earlier, have achieved notable success. Such was the opinion of all. But the morale, as well as the strength of the Turks, had had time to rise to great heights since our last serious encounters with them on the 21st and 28th of June and on the 12th of July. On those dates all ranks had felt, as an army feels, instinctively, yet with certitude, that they had fairly got the upper hand of the enemy, and that, given the wherewithal, they could have gone on steadily advancing. Now that self-same, half-beaten enemy were again making as stout a resistance as they had offered us at our original landing!

For this recovery of the Turks there were three reasons; one moral, one material, and one fortuitous:—

(1) The news of the enemy's advance on the Eastern front had come to hand and had been advertised to us on posters from the Turkish trenches before we heard about it from home.

(2) Two new divisions had come down south to Helles to replace those we had most severely handled.

(3) The enemy trenches selected for our attack were found to be packed with troops and so were their communication trenches, the reason being, as explained to us by prisoners, that the Turkish Commander had meant to launch from them an attack upon us. We had, in fact, by a coincidence as strange as it was unlucky, anticipated a Turkish offensive by an hour or two at most!

Sure enough, next morning, the enemy in their turn attacked the left of the line from which our own troops had advanced to the assault. A few of them gained a footing in our trenches and were all killed or captured. The remainder were driven back by fire.

As the aim of my action in this southern zone was to advance if I could, but in any case to contain the enemy and prevent him reinforcing to the northwards, I persevered on the 7th with my plans, notwithstanding the counter-attack of the Turks which was actually in progress. My objective this time was a double line of Turkish trenches on a front of about 800 yards between the Mal Tepe Dere and the west branch of the Kanli Dere. After a preliminary bombardment the troops of the 125th Brigade on the right and the 129th on the left made the assault at 9-40 A.M. From the outset it was evident that the enemy were full of fight and in great force, and that success would only be gained after a severe struggle. On the right and on the centre the first enemy line was captured, and small parties pushed on to the second line, where they were unable to maintain themselves for long,

On the left, but little ground was gained, and by 11 A.M., what little had been taken had been relinquished. But in the centre a stiff battle raged all day up and down a vineyard some 200 yards long by 100 yards broad on the west of the Krithia Road. A large portion of the vineyard had been captured in the first dash, and the East Lancashire men in this part of the field gallantly stood their ground here against a succession of vigorous counter-attacks. The enemy suffered very severely in these counter-attacks, which were launched in strength and at short intervals. Both our Brigades had also lost heavily during the advance and in repelling the fierce onslaughts of the enemy, but owing to the fine endurance of the 6th and 7th Battalions of the Lancashire Fusiliers, it was found possible to hold the vineyard through the night, and a massive column of the enemy which strove to overwhelm their thinned ranks was shattered to pieces in the attempt.

On 8th August Lieutenant-General Sir F. J. Davis took over command of the 8th Army Corps, and Major-General W. Douglas reverted to the command of the 42nd Divison. For two more days his troops were called upon to show their qualities of vigilance and power of determined resistance, for the enemy had by no means yet lost hope of wresting from us the ground we had won in the vineyard. This unceasing struggle was a supreme test for battalions already exhausted by 48 hours' desperate fighting and weakened by the loss of so many good leaders and men; but the peculiar grit of the Lancastrians was equal to the strain, and they did not fail. Two specially furious counter-attacks were delivered by the Turks on the 8th August, one at 4-40 A.M., and another at 8-30 P.M., where again our bayonets were too much for them. Throughout the night they made continuous bomb attacks, but the 6th Lancashire Fusiliers and the 4th East Lancashire Regiment stuck gamely to their task at the eastern corner of the vineyard. There was desparate fighting also at the northern corner, where the personal bravery of Lieutenant W. T. Forshaw, 1/9th Manchester Regiment, who stuck to his post after his detachment had been relieved (an act for which he has since been awarded the V.C.), was largely instrumental in the repulse of three very determined onslaughts.

By the morning of the 9th August things were quieter, and the sorely tried troops were relieved. On the night of the 12th—13th the enemy made one more sudden, desperate dash for their vineyard—and got it! But, on the 13th, our bombers took the matter in hand. The Turks were finally driven out; the new fire trenches were wired and looopholed, and have since become part of our line.

These two attacks had served their main purpose. If the local successes were not all that had been hoped for, yet a useful advance had been achieved, and not only had they given a fresh, hard fighting enemy more than he had bargained for, but they had actually drawn down Turkish reinforcements to their area. And how can a Commander say enough for the troops who, aware that their task was only a subsidiary one, fought with just as much vim and resolution as if they were storming the battlements of Constantinople.

I will now proceed to tell of the assault on Chunuk Bair by the forces under General Birdwood and of the landing of the 9th Corps in the neighbourhood of Suvla Bay. The entire details of the operations allotted to the troops to be employed in the Anzac area were formulated by Lieutenant-General Birdwood, subject only to my final approval. So excellently was this vital business worked out on the lines of the instructions issued that I had no modifications to suggest, and all these local preparations were completed by August 6th in a way which reflects the greatest credit, not only on the Corps Commander and his staff, but also upon the troops themselves, who had to toil like slaves to accumulate food, drink and munitions of war. Alone the accommodation for the extra troops to be landed necessitated an immense amount of work in preparing new concealed bivouacs, in making interior communications, and in storing water and supplies, for I was determined to put on shore as many fighting men as our modest holding at Anzac could possibly accommodate or provision. All the work was done by Australian and New Zealand soldiers almost entirely by night, and the uncomplaining efforts of these much-tried troops in preparation are in a sense as much to their credit as their heroism in the battles that follow. Above all, the water problem caused anxiety to the Admiral, to Lieutenant-General Birdwood and to myself. The troops to advance from Suvla Bay across the Anafarta valley might reckon on finding some wells—it was certain, at least, that no water was waiting for us on the crests of the ridges of Sari Bair! Therefore, first, several days' supply had to be stocked into tanks along the beach and thence pumped up into other tanks half-way up the mountains; secondly, a system of mule transport had to be worked out, so that in so far as was humanly possible, thirst should not be allowed to overcome the troops after they had overcome the difficulties of the country and the resistance of the enemy

On the nights of the 4th, 5th and 6th August the reinforcing troops were shipped into Anzac very silently at the darkest hours. Then, still silently, they were tucked away from enemy æroplanes or observatories in their prepared hidding places. The whole sea route lay open to the view of the Turks upon Achi Baba's summit and Battleship Hill Aeroplanes could count every tent and every ship at Mudros or at Imbros. Within rifle fire of Anzac's open beach hostile riflemen were looking out across the Ægean no more than twenty feet from our opposing lines. Every modern appliance of telescope, telegraph, wireless was at the disposal of the enemy. Yet the instructions worked out at General Headquarters in the minutest detail (the result of conferences with the Royal Navy, which were attended by Brigadier-General Skeen, of General Birdwood's Staff) were such that the scheme was carried through without a hitch The preparation of the ambush was treated as a simple matter by the services therein engaged, and yet I much doubt whether any more pregnant enterprise than this of landing so large a force under the very eyes of the enemy, and of keeping them concealed there three days, is recorded in the annals of war.

The troops now at the disposal of General Birdwood amounted in round numbers to 37,000 rifles and 72 guns, with naval support from two cruisers, four monitors and two destroyers. Under the scheme these troops were to be divided into two main portions. The task of holding the existing Anzac position, and of making frontal assaults therefrom, was assigned to the Australian Division (plus the 1st and 3rd Light Horse Brigades and two battalions of the 40th Brigade); that of assaulting the Chunuk Bair ridge was entrusted to the New Zealand and Australian Division (less the 1st and 3rd Light Horse Brigades), to the 13th Division (less five battalions), and to the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade and to the Indian Mountain Artillery Brigade. The 29th Brigade of the 10th Division (less one battalion) and the 38th Brigade were held in reserve.

The most simple method of developing this complicated series of operations will be first to take the frontal attacks from the existing Anzac position, and afterwards to go on to the assault on the more distant ridges. During the 4th, 5th and 6th of August the works on the enemy's left and centre were subjected to a slow bombardment, and on the afternoon of the 6th August an assault was made upon the formidable Lone Pine entrenchment. Although, in its essence, a diversion to draw the enemy's attention and reserves from the grand attack impending upon his right, yet, in itself, Lone Pine was a distinct step on the way across to Maidos. It commanded one of the main sources of the Turkish water-supply, and was a work, or, rather, a series of works, for the safety of which the enemy had always evinced a certain nervousness. The attack was designed to highten this impression.

The work consisted of a strong point d'appui on the south-western end of a plateau, where it confronted, at distances varying from 60 to 120 yards, the salient in the line of our trenches named by us the Pimple. The entrenchment was evidently very strong; it was entangled with wire, and provided with overhead cover, and it was connected by numerous communication trenches with another point d'appui known as Johnston's Jolly on the north, as well as with two other works on the east and south. The frontage for attack amounted at most to some 220 yards and the approaches lay open to heavy enfilade fire, both from the north and from the south.

The detailed scheme of attack was worked out with care and forethought by Major-General H. B. Walker, Commanding 1st Australian Division, and his thoroughness contributed, I consider, largely to the success of the enterprise.

The action commenced at 4-30 P.M. with a continuous and heavy bombardment of the Lone Pine and adjacent trenches, H.M.S. "Bacchante" assisting by searching the valleys to the north-east and east, and the Monitors by shelling the enemy's batteries south of Gaba Tepe. The assualt had been entrusted to the 1st Australian Brigade (Brigadier-General N. M. Smyth), and punctually at 5-30 P.M. it was carried out by the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Australian Battalions, the 1st Battalion forming the Brigade reserve. Two lines left their trenches simultaneously, and were closely followed up by a third. The rush across the open was a regular race against death, which came in the shape of a hail of shell and rifle bullets from front and from either flank. But the Australians had firmly resolved to reach the enemy's trenches, and in thi determination they became for the moment invincible. The barbed wire entanglement was reached and was surmounted. Then came a terrible moment, when it seemed as though it would be physically impossible to penetrate into the trenches. The overhead cover of stout pine beams resisted all individual efforts to move it, and the loopholes continued to spit fire. Groups of our men then bodily lifted up the beams and individual soldiers leaped down into the semi-darkened galleries amongst the Turks. By 5-47 P.M. the 3rd and 4th Battalions were well into the enemy's vitals, and a few minutes later the reserves of the 2nd Battalion advanced over their parados, and driving out, killing or capturing the occupants, made good the whole of the trenches. The reserve companies of the 3rd and 4th Battalions followed, and at 6-20 P.M. the 1st Battalion (in reserve) was launched to consolidate the position.

At once the Turks made it plain, as they have never ceased to do since, that they had no intention of acquiescing in the capture of this capital work. At 7-0 P.M. a determined and violent counter-attack began, both from the north and from the south. Wave upon wave the enemy swept forward with the bayonet. Here and there a well-directed salvo of bombs emptied a section of a trench, but whenever this occurred the gap was quickly filled by the initiative of the officers and the gallantry of the men.

The enemy allowed small respite. At 1-30 that night the battle broke out afresh. Strong parties of Turks swarmed out of the communication trenches, preceded by showers of bombs. For seven hours these counter-attacks continued. All this time consolidation was being attempted, although the presence of so many Turkish prisoners hampered movement and constituted an actual danger. In beating off these desperate counter-attacks very heavy casualties were suffered by the Australians. Part of the 12th Battalion, the reserve of the 3rd Brigade, had therefore to be thrown into the mêlée.

Twelve hours later, at 1-30 P.M. on the 7th, another effort was made by the enemy, lasting uninterruptedly at closest quarters till 5 P.M., then being resumed at midnight and proceeding intermittently till dawn. At an early period of this last counter-attack the 4th Battalion were forced by bombs to relinquish postion of a trench, but later on, led by their commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel McNaghten, they killed every Turk who had got in.

During the 8th of August advantage was taken of every cessation in the enemy's bombing to consolidate. The 2nd Battalion, which had lost its commanding officer and suffered especially severely, was withdrawn and replaced by the 7th Battalion, the reserve to the 2nd Infantry Brigade.

At 5 A.M. on 9th August the enemy made a sudden attempt to storm from the east and south-east after a feint of fire attack from the north. The 7th Battalion bore the brunt of the shock, and handled the attack so vigorously that by 7-45 A.M. there were clear signs of demoralisation in the enemy's ranks. But although this marked the end of counter-attacks on the large scale, the bombing and sniping continued, though in less volume, throughout this day and night, and lasted till 12th August, when it at last became manifest that we had gained complete ascendancy. During the final grand assault our losses from artillery fire were large, and ever since the work has passed into our hands it has been a favourite daily and nightly mark for heavy shells and bombs.

Thus was Lone Pine taken and held. The Turks were in great force and very full of fight, yet one weak Australian brigade, numbering at the outset but 2,000 rifles, and supported only by two weak battalions, carried the work under the eyes of a whole enemy division, and maintained their grip upon it like a vice during six days' successive counter-attacks. High praise is due to Brigadier-General N. M. Smyth and to his battalion commanders. The irresistible dash and daring of officers and men in the initial charge were a glory to Australia. The stout-heartedness with which they clung to the captured ground in spite of fatigue, severe losses and the continual strain of shell fire and bomb attacks may seem less striking to the civilian; it is even more admirable to the soldier. From start to finish the artillery support was untiring and vigilant. Owing to the rapid, accurate fire of the 2nd New Zealand Battery, under Major Sykes, several of the Turkish onslaughts were altogether defeated in their attempts to get to grips with the Australians. Not a chance was lost by these gunners, although time and again the enemy's artillery made direct hits on their shields. The hand-to-hand fighting in the semi-obscurity of the trenches was prolonged and very bitterly contested. In one corner eight Turks and 6 Australians were found lying as they had bayonetted one another. To make room for the fighting men the dead were ranged in rows on either side of the gangway. After the first violence of the counter-attacks had abated, 1,000 corpses—our own and Turkish—were dragged out from the trenches.

For the severity of our own casualties some partial consolation may be found in the facts, first, that those of the enemy were much heavier, our guns and machine-guns having taken toll of them as they advanced in mass formation along the reverse slopes; secondly, that the Lone Pine attack drew all the local enemy reserves towards it, and may be held, more than any other cause, to have been the reason that the Suvla Bay landing was so lightly opposed, and that comparatively few of the enemy were available at first to reinforce against our attack on Sari Bair. Our captures in this feat of arms amounted to 134 prisoners, seven machine-guns, and a large quantity of ammunition and equipment.

Other frontal attacks from the existing Anzac positions were not so fortunate. They fulfilled their object in so far as they prevented the enemy from reinforcing against the attack upon the high ridges, but they failed to make good any ground. Taken in sequence of time, they included an attack upon the work known as German Officers' Trench, on the extreme right of our line, at midnight on August 6th—7th, also assaults on the Nek and Baby 700 trenches opposite the centre of our line, delivered at 4-30 A.M. on the 7th. The 2nd Australian Brigade did all that men could do; the 8th Light Horse only accepted their repulse after losing three-fourths of that devoted band, who so bravely sallied forth from Russell's Top. Some of the works were carried, but in these cases the enemy's concealed machine guns made it impossible to hold on. But all that day, as the result of these most gallant attacks, Turkish reserves on Battleship Hill were being held back to meet any dangerous development along the front of the old Anzac line, and so were not available to meet our main enterprise, which I will now endeavour to describe.

The first step in the real push—the step which above all others was to count—was the night attack on the summits of the Sari Bair ridge. The crest line of this lofty mountain range runs parallel to the sea, dominating the under-features contained within the Anzac position, although these fortunately defilade the actual landing-place. From the main ridge a series of spurs run down towards the level beach, and are separated from one another by deep jagged gullies choked up with dense jungle. Two of these leading up to Chunuk Bair are called Chailak Dere and Sazli Beit Dere; another deep ravine runs up to Koja Chemen Tepe (Hill 305), the topmost peak of the whole ridge, and is called the Aghyl Dere.

It was our object to effect a lodgment along the crest of the high, main ridge with two columns of troops, but, seeing the nature of the ground and the dispositions of the enemy, the effort had to be made by stages. We were bound, in fact, to undertake a double subsidiary operation before we could hope to launch these attacks with any real prospect of success.

(1) The right covering force was to seize Table Top, as well as all other enemy positions commanding the foothills between the Chailak Dere and the Sazli Beit Dere ravines. If this enterprise succeeded it would open up the ravines for the assaulting columns, whilst at the same time interposing between the right flank of the left covering force and the enemy holding the Sari Bair main ridge.

(2) The left covering force was to march northwards along the beach to seize a hill called Damakjelik Bair, some 1,400 yards north of Table Top. If successful it would be able to hold out a hand to the 9th Corps as it landed south of Nibrunesi Point, whilst at the same time protecting the left flank of the left assaulting column against enemy troops from the Anafarta valley during its climb up the Aghyl Dere ravine.

(3) The right assaulting column was to move up the Chailak Dere and Sazli Beit Dere ravines to the storm of the ridge of Chunuk Bair.

(4) The left assaulting column was to work up the Aghyl Dere and prolong the line of the right assaulting column by storming Hill 305 (Koja Chemen Tepe), the summit of the whole range of hills.

To recapitulate, the two assaulting columns, which were to work up three ravines to the storm of the high ridge, were to be preceded by two covering columns. One of these was to capture the enemy's positions commanding the foothills, first to open the mouths of the ravines, secondly to cover the right flank of another covering force whilst it marched along the beach. The other covering column was to strike far out to the north until, from a hill called Damajelik Bair, it could at the same time facilitate the landing of the 9th Corps at Nibrunesi Point, and guard the left flank of the column assaulting Sari Bair from any forces of the enemy which might be assembled in the Anafarta valley.

The whole this big attack was placed under the command of Major-General Sir A. J. Godley, General Officer Commanding New Zealand and Australian Division. The two covering and the two assaulting columns were organized as follows:—

Right Covering Column, under Brigadier-General A. H. Russell.—New Zealand Mounted Rifles Brigade, the Otago Mounted Rifles Regiment, the Maori Contingent and New Zealand Field Troop.

Right Assaulting Column, under Brigadier-General F. E. Johnston.—New Zealand Infantry Brigade, Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), one Company New Zealand Engineers.

Left Assaulting Column, under Brigadier-General (now Major-General) H. V. Cox.—29th Indian Infantry Brigade, 4th Australian Infantry Brigade, Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), one Company New Zealand Engineers.

Divisional Reserve.—6th Battalion, South Lancashire Regiment, and 8th Battalion, Welsh Regiment (Pioneers) at Chailak Dere, and the 39th Infantry Brigade and half 72nd, Field Company at Aghyl Dere.

The right covering column, it will be remembered, had to gain command of the Sazli Beit Dere and the Aghyl Dere ravines, so as to let the assaulting column arrive intact within striking distance of the Chunuk Bair ridge. To achieve this object it had to clear the Turks off from their right flank positions upon Old No. 3 Post and Table Top.

Old No. 3 Post connected with Table Top by a razor back, formed the apex of a triangular piece of hill sloping gradually down to our No. 2 and No. 3 outposts. Since its recapture from us by the Turks on 30th May, working parties had done their best with unstinted material to convert this commanding point into an impregnable redoubt. Two lines of fire trench, very heavily entangled, protected its southern face—the only one accessible to us—and, with its head cover of solid timber baulks and its strongly rivetted outworks, it dominated the approaches of both the Chailak Dere and the Sazli Beit Dere.

Table Top is steep-sided, flat-topped hill, close on 400 feet above sea level. The sides of the hill are mostly sheer and quite impracticable, but here and there a ravine, choked with scrub, and under fire of enemy trenches, gives precarious foothold up the precipitous cliffs. The small plateau on the summit was honeycombed with trenches, which were connected by a communication alley with that underfeature of Sari Bair, known as Rhododendron Spur.

Amongst other stratagems the Anzac troops, assisted by H.M.S. "Colne," had long and carefully been educating the Turks how they should lose Old No. 3 Post, which could hardly have been rushed by simple force of arms. Every night, exactly at 9 P.M., H.M.S. "Colne" threw the beam of her searchlight on to the redoubt, and opened fire upon it for exactly ten minutes. Then, after a ten minutes' interval, came a second illumination and bombardment commencing always at 9-20 and ending precisely at 9-30 P.M.

The idea was that, after successive nights of such practice, the enemy would get into the habit of taking the searchlight as a hint to clear out until the shelling was at an end. But on the eventful night of the 6th, the sound of their footsteps drowned by the loud cannonade, unseen as they crept along in that darkest shadow which fringes a searchlight's beam—came the right covering column. At 9-30 the light switched off, and instantly our men poured out of the scrub jungle and into the empty redoubt. By 11 P.M., the whole series of surrounding entrenchments were ours!

Once the capture of Old No. 3 Post was fairly under way, the remainder of the right covering column carried on with their attack upon Bauchop's

Hill and the Chailak Dere. By 10 P.M., the northernmost point, with its machine-gun, was captured and by 1 o'clock in the morning the whole of Bauchop's Hill, a maze of ridge and ravine, everywhere entrenched, was fairly in our hands.

The attack along the Chailak Dere was not so cleanly carried out—made indeed just about as ugly a start as any enemy could wish. Pressing eagerly forward through the night, the little column of stormers found themselves held up by a barbed-wire erection of unexampled height, depth and solidity, which completely closed the river bed—that is to say, the only practicable entrance to the ravine. The entanglement was flanked by a strongly-held enemy trench running right across the opening of the Chailak Dere. Here that splendid body of men, the Otago Mounted Rifles, lost some of their bravest and their best, but in the end, when things were beginning to seem desperate, a passage was forced through the stubborn obstacle with most conspicuous and cool courage by Captain Shera and a party of New Zealand Engineers, supported by the Maoris, who showed themselves worthy descendants of the warriors of the Gate Pah. Thus was the mouth of the Chailak Dere opened in time to admit of the unopposed entry of the right assaulting column.

Simultaneously the attack on Table Top had been launched under cover of a heavy bombardment from H.M.S. "Colne." No General on peace manœuvres would ask troops to attempt so break-neck an enterprise. The flanks of Table Top are so steep that the height gives an impression of a mushroom shape—of the summit bulging out over its stem. But just as faith moves mountains, so valour can carry them. The Turks fought bravely. The angle of Table Top's ascent is recognised in our regulations as "impracticable for infantry." But neither Turks nor angles of ascent were destined to stop Russell or his New Zealanders that night. There are moments during battle when life becomes intensified, when men become supermen, when the impossible becomes simple—and this was one of those moments. The scarped heights were scaled, the plateau was carried by midnight. With this brilliant feat the task of the right covering force was at an end. Its attacks had been made with the bayonet and bomb only; magazines were empty by order; hardly a rifle shot had been fired. Some 150 prisoners were captured as well as many rifles and much equipment, ammunition and stores. No words can do justice to the achievement of Brigadier-General Russell and his men. There are exploits which must be seen to be realised.

The right assaulting column had entered the two southerly ravines—Sazli Beit Dere and Chailak Dere—by midnight. At 1-30 A.M., began a hotly contested fight for the trenches on the lower part of Rhododendron Spur, whilst the Chailak Dere column pressed steadily up the valley against the enemy.

The left covering column, under Brigadier-General Travers, after marching along the beach to No. 3 Outpost, resumed its northerly advance as soon as the attack on Bauchop's Hill had developed. Once the Chailak Dere was cleared the column moved by the mouth of the Aghyl Dere, disregarding the enfilade fire from sections of Bauchop's Hill still uncaptured. The rapid success of this movement was largely due to Lieutenant-Colonel Gillespie, a very fine man, who commanded the advance guard consisting of his own regiment, the 4th South Wales Borderers, a corps worthy of such a leader. Every trench encountered was instantly rushed by the Borderers until, having reached the predetermined spot, the whole column was unhesitatingly launched at Damakjelik Bair. Several Turkish trenches were captured at the bayonet's point, and by 1-30 A.M., the whole of the hill was occupied, thus safeguarding the left rear of the whole of the Anzac attack.

Here was an encouraging sample of what the New Army, under good auspices, could accomplish. Nothing more trying to inexperienced troops can be imagined than a long night march exposed to flanking fire, through a strange country winding up at the end with a bayonet charge against a height formless and still in the starlight, garrisoned by those spectres of the imagination, worst enemies of the soldier.

The left assulting column crossed the Chailak Dere at 12-30 A.M., and entered the Aghyl Dere at the heels of the left covering column. The surprise, on this side, was complete. Two Turkish officers were caught in their pyjamas; enemy arms and ammunition were scattered in every direction.

The grand attack was now in full swing, but the country gave new sensations in cliff climbing even to officers and men who had graduated over the goat tracks of Anzac. The darkness of the night, the density of the scrub, hands and knees progress up the spurs, sheer physical fatigue, exhaustion of the spirit caused by repeated hairbreadth escapes from the hail of random bullets—all these combined to take the edge off the energies of our troops. At last, after advancing some distance up the Aghyl Dere, the column split up into two parts. The 4th Australian Brigade struggled, fighting hard as they went, up to the north of the northern fork of the Aghyl Dere, making for Hill 305 (Koja Chemen Tepe). The 29th Indian Infantry Brigade scrambled up the southern fork of the Aghyl Dere and the spurs north of it to the attack of a portion of the Sari Bair ridge known as Hill Q

Dawn broke and the crest line was not yet in our hands, although, considering all things, the left assaulting column had made a marvellous advance. The 4th Australian Infantry Brigade was on the line of the Asma Dere (the next ravine north of the Aghyl Dere) and the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade held the ridge west of the Farm below Chunuk Bair and along the spurs to the north-east. The enemy had been flung back from ridge to ridge; an excellent line for the renewal of the attack had been secured, and (except for the exhaustion of the troops) the auspices were propitious.

Turning to the right assaulting column, one battalion, the Canterbury Infantry Battalion, clambered slowly up the Sazli Beit Dere. The remainder of the force led by the Otago Battalion, wound their way amongst the pitfalls and forced their passage through the scrub of the Chailak Dere, where fierce opposition forced them ere long to deploy. Here, too, the hopeless country was the main hindrance, and it was not until 5-45 A.M. that the bulk of the column joined the Canterbury Battalion on the lower slopes of Rhododendron Spur. The whole force then moved up the spur, gaining touch with the left assaulting column by means of the 10th Gurkhas, in face of very heavy fire and frequent bayonet charges. Eventually they entrenched on the top of Rhododendron Spur, a quarter of a mile short of Chunuk Bair, i.e., of victory.

At 7 A.M. the 5th and 6th Gurkhas, belonging to the left assaulting column, had approached the main ridge north-east of Chunuk Bair, whilst, on their left, the 14th Sikhs had got into touch with the 4th Australian Brigade on the southern watershed of the Asma Dere. The 4th Australian Brigade now received orders to leave half a battalion to hold the spur, and, with the rest of its strength, plus the 14th Sikhs, to assault Hill 305 (Koja Chemen Tepe). But by this time the enemy's opposition had hardened, and his reserves were moving up from the direction of Battleship Hill. Artillery support was asked for and given, yet by 9 A.M. the attack of the right assaulting column on Chunuk Bair was checked, and any idea of a further advance on Koja Chemen Tepe had to be, for the moment, suspended. The most that could be done was to hold fast to the Asmak Dere watershed whilst attacking the ridge north-east of Chunuk Bair—an attack to be supported by a fresh assault launched against Chunuk Bair itself.

At 9-30 A.M. the two assaulting columns pressed forward whilst our guns pounded the enemy moving along the Battleship Hill spurs. But in spite of all their efforts their increasing exhaustion as opposed to the gathering strength of the enemy's fresh troops began to tell—they had shot their bolt. So all day they clung to what they had captured and strove to make ready for the night. At 11 A.M. three battalions of the 39th Infantry Brigade were sent up from the general reserve to be at hand when needed, and, at the same hour, one more battalion of the reserve was dispatched to the 1st Australian Division to meet the drain caused by all the desperate Lone Pine fighting.

By the afternoon the position of the two assaulting columns was unchanged. The right covering force were in occupation of Table Top, Old No. 3 Post and Bauchop's Hill, which General Russel had been ordered to maintain with two regiments of Mounted Rifles, so that he might have two other regiments and the Maori Contingent available to move as required. The left covering force held Damakjelik Bair. The forces which had attacked along the front of the original Anzac line were back again in their own trenches. The Lone Pine work was being furiously disputed. All had suffered heavily and all were very tired.

So ended the first phase of the fighting for the Chunuk Bair ridge. Our aims had not fully been attained, and the help we had hoped for from Suvla had not been forthcoming. Yet I fully endorse the words of General Birdwood when he says: "The troops had performed a feat which is without parallel."

Great kudos is due to Major-Generals Godley and Shaw for their arrangements; to Generals Russel, Johnston, Cox, and Travers for their leading;

but most of all, as every one of these officers will gladly admit, to the rank and file for their fighting. Nor may I omit to add that the true destroyer spirit with which H. M. S. "Colne" (Commander Claude Seymour, R.N.) and H. M. S "Chelmer" (Commander Hugh T. England, R.N.) backed us up will live in the grateful memories of the Army.

In the course of this afternoon (7th August) reconnaissances of Sari Bair were carried out and the troops were got into shape for a fresh advance in three columns to take place in the early morning.

The columns were composed as follows:—

Right column, Brigadier-General F. E. Johnston.—26th Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), Auckland Mounted Rifles, New Zealand Infantry Brigade, two battalions, 13th Division, and the Maori Contingent.

Centre and left columns Major-General H. V. Cox.—21st Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), 4th Australian Brigade, 39th Infantry Brigade (less one battalion) with 6th Battalion, South Lancashire Regiment, attached, and the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade.

The right column was to climb up the Chunuk Bair ridge; the left column was to make for the prolongation of the ridge north-east to Koja Chemen Tepe, the topmost peak of the range.

The attack was timed for 4-15 A.M. At the first faint glimmer of dawn observers saw figures moving against the sky-line of Chunuk Bair. Were they our own men, or were they the Turks? Telescopes were anxiously adjusted; the light grew stronger; men were seen climbing up from our side of the ridge; they were our own fellows—the topmost summit was ours!

On the right General Johnston's column, headed by the Wellington Battalion and supported by the 7th Battalion, Gloucestershire Regiment, the Auckland Mounted Rifles Regiment, the 8th Welsh Pioneers, and the Maori Contingent, the whole most gallantly led by Lieutenant-Colonel W. G. Malone, had raced one another up the steep. Nothing could check them. On they went, until with a last determined rush, they fixed themselves firmly on the south-western slopes and crest of the main knoll known as the height of Chunuk Bair. With deep regret I have to add that the brave Lieutenant-Colonel Malone fell mortally wounded as he was marking out the line to be held. The 7th Gloucesters suffered terrible losses here.

The fire was so hot that they never got a chance to dig their trenches deeper than some six inches, and there they had to withstand attack after attack. In the course of these fights every single officer, Company Serjeant-Major, or Company Quartermaster Serjeant, was either killed or wounded, and the Battalion by mid-day consisted of small groups of men commanded by junior non-commissioned officers or privates. Chapter and verse may be quoted for the view that the rank-and-file of an army can not long endure the strain of close hand-to-hand fighting unless they are given confidence by the example of good officers. Yet here is at least one instance where a battalion of the New Army fought right on, from midday till sunset, without any officers.

In the centre the 39th Infantry Brigade and the 29th Indian Brigade moved along the gullies leading up to the Sari Bair ridge—the right moving south of the Farm on Chunuk Bair, the left up the spurs to the north-east of the Farm against a portion of the main ridge north-east of Chunuk Bair, and the col to the north of it. So murderous was the enemy's fire that little progress could be made, though some ground was gained on the spurs to the north-east of the Farm.

On the left the 4th Australian Brigade advanced from the Asmak Dere against the lower slopes of Abdul Rahman Bair (a spur running due north from Koja Chemen Tepe) with the intention of wheeling to its right and advancing up the spur. Cunningly placed Turkish machine-guns and a strong entrenched body of infantry were ready for this move, and the Brigade were unable to get on. At last, on the approach of heavy columns of the enemy, the Australians, virtually surrounded, and having already suffered losses of over 1,000, were withdrawn to their original position. Here they stood at bay, and though the men were by now half dead with thirst and with fatigue, they bloodily repulsed attack after attack delivered by heavy columns of Turks.

So stood matters at noon. Enough had been done for honour and much ground had everywhere been gained. The expected support from Suvla hung fire, but the capture of Chunuk Bair was a presage of victory; even the troops who had been repulsed were quite undefeated—quite full of fight—and so it was decided to hold hard as we were till nightfall, and then to essay one more grand attack, wherein the footing gained of Chunuk Bair would this time be used as a pivot.

In the afternoon the battle slackened, excepting always at Lone Pine, where the enemy were still coming on in mass, and being mown down by our fire. Elsewhere the troops were busy digging and getting up water and food, no child's play, with their wretched lines of communication running within musketry range of the enemy.

That evening the New Zealand Brigade, with two regiments of New Zealand Mounted Rifles and the Maoris, held Rhododendron Spur and the south-western slopes of the main knoll of Chunuk Bair The front line was prolonged by the columns of General Cox and General Monash (with the 4th Australian Brigade). Behind the New Zealanders were the 38th Brigade in reserve, and in rear of General Monash two battalions of the 40th Brigade. The inner line was held as before, and the 29th Brigade (less two battalions), had been sent up from the general reserve, and remained still further in rear.

The columns for the renewed attack were composed as follows :—

No. 1 Column, Brigadier-General F. E. Johnston—26th Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), the Auckland and Wellington Mounted Rifles Regiments, the New Zealand Infantry Brigade, and two battalions of the 13th Division.

No. 2 Column, Major-General H. V. Cox—21st Indian Mountain Battery (less one section), 4th Australian Brigade, 39th Brigade (less the 7th Gloucesters relieved), with the 6th Battalion South Lancashire Regiment attached and the Indian Infantry Brigade.

No. 3 Column, Brigadier-General A. H. Baldwin, Commanding 38th Infantry Brigade—Two battalions each from the 38th and 29th Brigades and one from the 40th Brigade.

No. 1 column was to hold and consolidate the ground gained on the 6th, and, in co-operation with the other columns, to gain the whole of Chunuk Bair, and extend to the south-east. No. 2 column was to attack Hill Q on the Chunuk Bair ridge, and No. 3 column was to move from the Chailak Dere, also on Hill Q. This last column was to make the main attack, and the others were to co-operate with it.

At 4-30 A.M. on August 9th the Chunuk Bair ridge and Hill Q were heavily shelled. The naval guns, all the guns on the left flank, and as many as possible from the right flank (whence the enemy's advance could be enfiladed), took part in this cannonade, which rose to its climax at 5 15 A.M., when the whole ridge seemed a mass of flame and smoke, whence huge clouds of dust drifted slowly upwards in strange patterns on to the sky. At 5-16 A.M., this tremendous bombardment was to be switched off on to the flanks and reverse slopes of the heights.

General Baldwin's column had assembled in the Chailak Dere, and was moving up towards General Johnston's headquarters. Our plan contemplated the massing of this column immediately behind the trenches held by the New Zealand Infantry Bridge. Thence it was intended to launch the battalion in successive lines, keeping them as much as possible on the high ground. Infinite trouble had been taken to ensure that the narrow track should be kept clear, guides also were provided; but in spite of all precautions the darkness, the rough scrub-covered country, its sheer steepness, so delayed the column that they were unable to take full advantage of the configuration of the ground, and, inclining to the left, did not reach the line of the Farm—Chunuk Bair till 5-15 A.M. In plain English, Baldwin, owing to the darkness and the awful country, lost his way—through no fault of his own. The mischance was due to the fact that time did not admit of the detailed careful reconnaissance of routes which is so essential where operations are to be carried out by night.

And now, under that fine leader, Major C. G. L. Allanson, the 6th Gurkhas of the 29th Indian Infantry Brigade pressed up the slopes of Sari Bair, crowned the heights of the column between Chunuk Bair and Hill Q, viewed far beneath them the waters of the Hellespont, viewed the Asiatic shores along which motor transport was bringing supplies to the lighters. Not only did this battalion, as well as some of the 6th South Lancashire Regiment, reach the crest, but they began to attack down the far side of it, firing as they went at the fast retreating enemy. But the fortune of war was against us. At this supreme moment Baldwin's column was still a long way from our trenches on the crest of Chunuk Bair, whence they should even now have been sweeping out towards Q along the whole ridge of the mountain. And instead of Baldwin's support came suddenly a salvo of heavy shell. These falling so unexpectedly among the stormers threw them into terrible confusion. The Turkish Commander saw his chance; instantly his troops were rallied and brought back in a countercharge, and the South Lancashires and Gurkhas, who had seen the promised land and had seemed for a moment to have held victory in their grasp, were forced backwards over the crest and on to the lower slopes whence they had first started.

But where was the main attack—where was Baldwin? When that bold but unlucky commander found he could not possibly reach our trenches on the top of Chunuk Bair in time to take effective part in the fight he deployed for attack where he stood, i.e., at the farm to the left of the New Zealand Brigade's trenches on Rhododendron Spur. Now his men were coming on in fine style and, just as the Turks topped the ridge with shouts of elation, two companies of the 6th East Lancashire Regiment, together with the 10th Hampshire Regiment, charged up our side of the slope with the bayonet. They had gained the high ground immediately below the commanding knoll on Chunuk Bair, and a few minutes earlier would have joined hands with the Gurkhas and South Lancashires and combined with them, would have carried all before them. But the Turks by this time were lining the whole of the high crest in overwhelming numbers. The New Army troops attacked with a fine audacity, but they were flung back from the height and then pressed still further down the slope, until General Baldwin had to withdraw his command to the vicinity of the Farm, whilst the enemy, much encouraged, turned their attention to the New Zealand troops and the two New Army battalions of No. 1 Column still holding the south-west half of the main knoll of Chunuk Bair. Constant attacks urged with fanatical persistence, were met here with a sterner resolution, and although, at the end of the day, our troops were greatly exhausted, they still kept their footing on the summit. And if that summit meant much to us, it meant even more to the Turks. For the ridge covered our landing places, it is true, but it covered not only the Turkish beaches at Kilia Leman and Maidos, but also the Narrows themselves and the road leading northward to Bulair and Constantinople.

That evening our line ran along Rhododendron Spur up to the crest of Chunuk Bair, where about 200 yards were occupied and held by some 800 men. Slight trenches had hastily been dug, but the fatigue of the New Zealanders and the fire of the enemy had prevented solid work being done. The trenches in many places were not more than a few inches deep. They were not protected by wire. Also many officers are of opinion that they had not been well sited in the first instance. On the South African system the main line was withdrawn some twenty-five yards from the crest instead of being actually on the crestline itself, and there were not even look-out posts along the summit. Boer skirmishers would thus have had to show themselves against the skyline before they could annoy. But here we were faced by regulars taught to attack in mass with bayonet or bomb. And the power of collecting overwhelming numbers at very close quarters rested with whichever side held the true skyline in force. From Chunuk Bair the line ran down to the Farm and almost due north to the Asam Dere southern watershed, whence it continued westward to the sea near Asmak Kuyu. On the right the Australian Division was still holding its line and Lone Pine was still being furiously attacked. The first Australian Brigade was now reduced from 2,900 to 1,000, and the total casualties up to 8 P.M. on the 9th amounted to about 8,500. But the troops were still in extraordinarily good heart, and nothing could damp their keenness. The only discontent shown was by men who were kept in reserve.

During the night of the 9th—10th, the New Zealand and new Army troops on Chunuk Bair were relieved. For three days and three nights they had been ceaselessly fighting. They were half dead with fatigue. Their lines of communication started from sea level, ran across trackless ridges and ravines to an altitude of 800 feet, and were exposed all the way to snipers' fire and artillery bombardment. It had become imperative, therefore, to get them enough food, water, and rest; and for this purpose it was imperative also to withdraw them. Chunuk Bair, which they had so magnificently held, was now handed over to two battalions of the 13th Division, which were connected by the 10th Hampshire Regiment with the troops at the farm. General Sir William Birdwood is emphatic on the point that the nature of the ground is such that there was no room on the crest for more than this body of 800 to 1,000 rifles.

The two battalions of the New Army chosen to hold Chunuk Bair were the 6th Loyal North Lancashire Regiment and the 5th Wiltshire Regiment. The first of these arrived in good time and occupied the trenches. Even in the darkness their Commanding Officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Levinge, recognised how dangerously these trenches were sited, and he began at once to dig observation posts on the actual crest and to strengthen the defences where he could. But he had not time given him to do much. The second battalion, the Wiltshires, were delayed by the intricate country. They did not reach the edge of the entrenchment until 4 A.M., and were then told to lie down in what was believed erroneously to be a covered position.

At daybreak on Tuesday, 10th August, the Turks delivered a grand attack from the line Chunuk Bair-Hill Q against these two battalions, already weakened in numbers, though not in spirit, by previous fighting. First our men were shelled by every enemy gun, and then, at 5-30 A.M., were assaulted by a huge column, consisting of no less than a full division plus a regiment of three battalions. The North Lancashire men were simply overwhelmed in their shallow trenches by sheer weight of numbers, whilst the Wilts, who were caught out in the open, were literally almost annihilated. The ponderous mass of the enemy swept over the crest, turned the right flank of our line below, swarmed round the Hampshires and General Baldwin's column, which had to give ground, and were only extricated with great difficulty and very heavy losses.

Now it was our turn. The warships and the New Zealand and Australian Artillery, the Indian Mountain Artillery Brigade, and the 69th Brigade Royal Field Artillery were getting the chance of a lifetime. As the successive solid lines of Turks topped the crest of the ridge gaps were torn through their formation, and an iron rain fell on them as they tried to reform in the gullies.

Not here only did the Turks pay dearly for their recapture of the vital crest. Enemy reinforcements continued to move up Battleship Hill under heavy and accurate fire from our guns, and still they kept topping the ridges and pouring down the western slopes of the Chunuk Bair as if determined to regain everything they had lost. But once they were over the crest they became exposed not only to the full blast of the guns, naval and military, but also to a battery of ten machine guns belonging to the New Zealand Infantry Brigade, which played upon their serried ranks at close range until the barrels were red hot. Enormous losses were inflicted, specially by these ten machine-guns; and, of the swarms which had once fairly crossed the crest line, only the merest handful ever straggled back to their own side of Chunuk Bair.

At the same time strong forces of the enemy (forces which I had reckoned would have been held back to meet our advance from Suvla Bay) were hurled against the Farm and the spurs to the north-east, where there arose a conflict so deadly that it may be considered as the climax of the four days' fighting for the ridge. Portions of our line were pierced, and the troops driven clean down the hill. At the foot of the hill the men were rallied by Staff Captain Street, who was there supervising the transport of food and water. Without a word, unhesitatingly, they followed him back to the Farm, where they plunged again into the midst of that series of struggles in which generals fought in the ranks and men dropped their scientific weapons and caught one another by the throat. So desperate a battle cannot be described. The Turks came on again and again, fighting magnificently. Our men stood to it, and maintained by many a deed of daring, the old traditions of their race. There was no flinching. They died in the ranks where they stood. Here Generals Cayley, Baldwin, and Cooper and all their gallant men achieved great glory. On this bloody field fell Brigadier-General Baldwin, who earned his first laurels on Cæsar's Camp at Ladysmith. There, too, fell Brigadier-General Cooper, badly wounded; and there, too, fell Lieutenant-Colonel M. H. Nunn, commanding the 9th Worcestershire Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel H. G. Levinge, commanding the 6th Loyal North Lancashire Regiment; and Lieutenant-Colonel J. Carden, commanding the 5th Wiltshire Regiment.

Towards this supreme struggle the absolute last two battalions from the General Reserve were now hurried, but by 10 A.M. the effort of the enemy was spent. Soon their shattered remnants began to trickle back, leaving a track of corpses behind them, and by night, except prisoners or wounded, no live Turk was left upon our side of the slope.

That same day, 10th August, two attacks, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon, were delivered on our positions along the Asmak Dere and Damakjelik Bair. Both were repulsed with heavy loss by the 4th Australian Brigade and the 4th South Wales Borderers, the men of the New Army showing all the steadiness of veterans. Sad to say, the Borderers lost their intrepid leader, Lieutenant-Colonel Gillespie, in the course of this affair.

By evening the total casualties of General Birdwood's force had reached 12,000, and included a very large proportion of officers. The 13th Division of the New Army, under Major-General Shaw, had alone lost 6,000 out of a grand total of 10,500. Baldwin was gone and all his staff. Ten Commanding Officers out of thirteen had disappeared from the fighting effectives. The Warwicks and the Worcesters had lost literally every single officer. The old German notion that no unit would stand a loss of more than 25 per cent. had been completely falsified. The 13th Division and the 29th Brigade of the 10th (Irish) Division had lost more than twice that proportion, and, in spirit, were game for as much more fighting as might be required. But physically, though Birdwood's forces were prepared to hold all they had got, they were now too exhausted to attack—at least until they had rested and reorganised. So far they had held on to all they had gained, excepting only the footholds on the ridge between Chunuk Bair and Hill 'Q,' momentarily carried by the Gurkhas, and the salient of Chunuk Bair itself, which they had retained for forty-eight hours. Unfortunately, these two pieces of ground, small and worthless as they seemed, were worth, according to the ethics of war, 10,000 lives, for by their loss or retention they just marked the difference between an important success and a signal victory.

At times I had thought of throwing my reserves into this stubborn central battle, where probably they would have turned the scale. But each time the water troubles made me give up the idea, all ranks at Anzac, being reduced to one pint a day. True thirst is a sensation unknown to the dwellers in cool, well-watered England. But at Anzac, when mules with water "pakhals" arrived at the front, the men would rush up to them in swarms just to lick the moisture that had exuded through the canvas bags. It will be understood, then, that until wells had been discovered under the freshly-won hills, the reinforcing of Anzac by even so much as a brigade was unthinkable.

The grand coup had not come off. The Narrows were still out of sight and beyond field-gun range But this was not the fault of Lieutenant-General Birdwood or any of the officers and men under his command. No mortal can command success; Lieutenant-General Birdwood had done all that mortal man can do to deserve it. The way in which he worked out his instructions into practical arrangements and dispositions upon the terrain reflect high credit upon his military capacity. I also wish to bring to your Lordship's notice the valuable services of Major-General Godley, commanding the New Zealand and Australian Division. He had under him at one time a force amounting to two divisions, which he handled with conspicuous ability. Major-General F. C. Shaw, Commanding 13th Division, also rose superior to all the trials and tests of these trying days. His calm and sound judgment proved to be of the greatest value throughout the arduous fighting I have recorded.

As for the troops, the joyous alacrity with which they faced danger, wounds and death, as if they were some new form of exciting recreation, has astonished me—old campaigner as I am. I will say no more, leaving Major-General Godley to speak for what happened under his eyes:—"I cannot close my report," he says, "without placing on record my unbounded admiration of the work performed, and the gallantry displayed, by the troops and their leaders during the severe fighting involved in these operations. Though the Australian, New Zealand, and Indian units had been confined to trench duty in a cramped space for some four months, and though the troops of the New Armies had only just landed from a sea voyage, and many of them had not been previously under fire, I do not believe that any troops in the world could have accomplished more. All ranks vied with one another in the performance of gallant deeds and more than worthily upheld the best traditions of the British Army."

Although the Sari Bair ridge was the key to the whole of my tactical conception, and although the temptation to view this vital Anzac battle at closer quarters was very hard to resist, there was nothing in its course or conduct to call for my personal intervention.

The conduct of the operations which were to be based upon Suvla Bay was entrusted to Lieutenant-General the Hon'ble Sir F. Stopford. At his disposal was placed the 9th Army Corps, less the 13th Division and the 29th Brigade of the 10th Division.

We believed that the Turks were still unsuspicious about Suvla and that their only defences near that part of the coast were a girdle of trenches round Lala Baba and a few unconnected lengths of fire trench on Hill 10 and on the hills forming the northern arm of the bay. There was no wire. Inland a small work had been constructed on Yilghin Burnu (locally known as Chocolate Hills), and a few guns had been placed upon these hills, as well as upon Ismail Oglu Tepe, whence they could be brought into action either against the beaches of Suvla Bay or against any attempt from Anzac to break out northwards and attack Chunuk Bair. The numbers of the enemy allotted for the defence of the Suvla and Ejelmer areas (including the troops in the Anafarta villages, but exclusive of the general reserves in rear of the Sari Bair) were supposed to be under 4,000. Until the Turkish version of these events is in our hands it is not possible to be certain of the accuracy of this estimate. All that can be said at present is that my Intelligence Department were wonderfully exact in their figures as a rule and that, in the case in question, events, the reports made by prisoners, etc., etc., seem to show that the forecast was correct.

Arrangements for the landing of the 9th Corps at Suvla were worked out in minute detail by my General Headquarters Staff in collaboration with the staff of Vice-Admiral de Robeck, and every precaution was taken to ensure that the destination of the troops was kept secret up to the last moment.

While concentrated at the Island of Imbros the spirit and physique of the 11th Division had impressed me very favourably. They were to lead off the landing. From Imbros they were to be ferried over to the Peninsula in destroyers and motor-lighters. Disembarkation was to begin at 10-30 P.M., half an hour later than the attack on the Turkish out-posts on the northern flank at Anzac, and I was sanguine enough to hope that the elaborate plan we had worked out would enable three complete brigades of infantry to be set ashore by daylight. Originally it had been intended that all three brigades should land on the beach immediately south of Nibrunesi Point, but in deference to the representations of the Corps Commander I agreed, unfortunately, as it turned out, to one brigade being landed inside the bay.

The first task of the 9th Corps was to seize and hold the Chocolate and Ismail Oglu Hills together with the high ground on the north and east of Suvla Bay. If the landing went off smoothly, and if my information regarding the strength of the enemy were correct, I hoped that these hills, with their guns, might be well in our possession before daybreak. In that case I hoped, further, that the first division which landed would be strong enough to picket and hold all the important heights within artillery range of the bay, when General Stopford would be able to direct the remainder of his force, as it became available, through the Anafartas to the east of the Sari Bair, where it should soon smash the mainspring of the Turkish opposition to Anzac.

On the 22nd July I issued secret instruction and tables showing the number of craft available for the 9th Corps Commander, their capacity, and the points whereat the troops could be disembarked; also what numbers of troops, animals, vehicles, and stores could be landed simultaneously. The allocation of troops to the ships and boats was left to General Stopford's own discretion, subject only to naval exigencies, otherwise the order of the disembarkation might not have tallied with the order of his operations.

The factors governing the hour of landing were: First, that no craft could quit Kephalos Bay before dark (about 9 P.M.): secondly, that nothing could be done which would attract the attention of the enemy before 10 P.M., the moment when the outposts on the left flank of the Anzac position were to be rushed.

General Stopford next framed his orders on these secret instructions, and after they had received my complete approval he proceeded to expound them to the General Officer Commanding 11th Division and General Officer Commanding 10th Division, who came over from Mudros for the purpose.

As in the original landing, the luck of calm weather favoured us, and all the embarkation arrangements at Kephalos were carried out by the Royal Navy in their usual ship-shape style. The 11th Division was to be landed at three places, designated and shown on the map as A, B, and C. Destroyers were told off for these landing-places, each destroyer towing a steam-lighter and picket-boat. Every light was to be dowsed, and as they neared the shore the destroyers were to slip their motor-lighters and picket-boats, which would then take the beach and discharge direct on to it. The motor-lighters were new acquisitions since the first landing, and were to prove the greatest possible assistance. They moved five knots an hour under their own engines, and carried 500 men, as well as stores of ammunition and water. After landing their passengers they were to return to the destroyers, and in one trip would empty them also. Ketches with service launches and transport lifeboats were to follow the destroyers and anchor at the entrance of the bay, so that in case of accidents or delays to any one of the motor-lighters a picket-boat could be sent at once to a ketch to pick up a tow of lifeboats and take the place of a disabled motor-lighter. These ketches and tows were afterwards to be used for evacuating the wounded.

H. M. S. "Endymion" and H. M. S. "Theseus" each carrying a thousand men, were also to sail from Imbros after the destroyers, and lying off the beach, were to discharge their troops directly the motor lighters—three to each ship—were ready to convey the men to the shore, i.e., after they had finished disembarking their own loads and those of the destroyers. When this was done—i.e., after three trips—the motor-lighters would be free to go on transporting guns, stores, mules, etc.

The following crafts brought up the rear :—

(1) Two ketches, each towing four horse boats carrying four 18-pounder guns and twenty-four horses.

(2) One ketch, towing horse-boats with forty horses.

(3) The sloop "Aster,' with 500 men, towing a lighter containing eight mountain guns.

(4) Three ketches, towing horse-boats containing eight 18-pounder guns and seventy-six horses.

Water-lighters, towed by a tank steamer, were also timed to arrive at A beach at day-light. When they had been emptied they were to return at once to Kephalos to refill from the parent water-ship.

A specially fitted-out steamer, the "Prah" with stores (shown by our experience of 25th April to be most necessary)—i.e., water-pumps, hose, tanks, troughs, entrenching tools, and all ordnance stores requisite for the prompt development of wells or springs—was also sent to Suvla.

So much detail I have felt bound, for the sake of clearness, to give in the body of my despatch. The further detail, showing numbers landed, etc., etc., will be found in the appendix and tables attached.

When originally I conceived the idea of these operations, one of the first points to be weighed was that of the water-supply in the Biyuk Anafarta valley and the Suvla plain. Experience at Anzac had shown quite clearly that the whole plan must be given up unless a certain amount of water could be counted upon, and, fortunately, the information I received was reassuring. But, in case of accidents, and to be on the safe side, so long ago as June had I begun to take steps to counter the chance that we might from one cause or another find difficulty in developing the wells. Having got from the War Office all that they could give me, I addressed myself to India and Egypt, and eventually from these three sources I managed to secure portable receptacles for 100,000 gallons, including petrol tins, milk cans, camel tanks, water bags and "pakhals".

Supplementing these were lighters and water-ships, all under naval control. Indeed, by arrangement with the Admiral, the responsibility of the Army was confined to the emptying of the lighters and the distribution of the water to the troops, the Navy undertaking to bring the full lighters to the shore to replace the empty ones, thus providing a continuous supply.

Finally 3,700 mules, together with 1,750 water carts, were provided for Anzac and Suvla—this in addition to 950 mules already at Anzac. Representatives of the Director of Supplies and Transport at Suvla and Anzac were sent to allot the transport which was to be used for carrying up whatever was most needed by units ashore, whether water, food or ammunition.

This statement, though necessarily brief, will, I hope, suffice to throw some light upon the complexity of the arrangements thought out beforehand in order, so far as was humanly possible, to combat the disorganisation, the hunger and the thirst which lie in wait for troops landing on a hostile beach.

On the evening of 6th August the 11th Division sailed on its short journey from Imbros (Kephalos) to Suvla Bay and, meeting with no mischance, the landing took place, the brigades of the 11th Division getting ashore practically simultaneously; the 32nd and 33rd Brigades at B and C beaches, the 34th at A beach.

The surprise of the Turks was complete. At B and C the beaches were found to be admirably suited to their purpose, and there was no opposition. The landing at A was more difficult, both because of the shoal water and because there the Turkish pickets and sentries—the normal guardians of the coast—were on the alert and active. Some of the lighters grounded a good way from the shore, and men had to struggle towards the beach in as much as four feet six inches of water. Ropes in several instances were carried from the lighters to the shore to help to sustain the heavily accoutred infantry. To add to the difficulties of the 34th Brigade the lighters came under flanking rifle fire from the Turkish outposts at Lala Baba and Ghazi Baba. The enemy even, knowing every inch of the ground, crept down in the very dark night on to the beach ifself, mingling with our troops and getting between our firing line and its supports. Fortunately the number of these enterprising foes was but few, and an end was soon put to their activity on the actual beaches by the sudden storming of Lala Baba from the south. This attack was carried out by the 9th West Yorkshire Regiment and the 6th Yorkshire Regiment, both of the 32nd Brigade which had landed at B beach and marched up along the coast. The assault succeeded at once, and without much loss, but both battalions deserve great credit for the way it was delivered in the inky darkness of the night.

The 32nd Brigade was now pushed on to the support of the 34th Brigade, which was held up by another outpost of the enemy on Hill 10 (117 R and S), and it is feared that some of the losses incurred here were due to misdirected fire. While this fighting was still in progress the 11th Battalion, Manchester Regiment, of the 34th Brigade was advancing northwards in very fine style driving the enemy opposed to them back along the ridge of the Karakol Dagh towards the Kiretch Tepe Sirt. Beyond doubt these Lancashire men earned much distinction, fighting with great pluck and grit against an enemy not very numerous perhaps but having an immense advantage in knowledge of the ground. As they got level with Hill 10 it grew light enough to see, and the enemy began to shell. No one seems to have been present who could take hold of the two brigades, the 32nd and 34th, and launch them in a concerted and cohesive attack. Consequently there was confusion and hesitation, increased by gorse fires lit by hostile shell, but redeemed, I am proud to report, by the conspicuously fine, soldierly conduct of several individual battalions. The whole of the Turks locally available were by now in the field, and they were encouraged to counter-attack by the signs of hesitation, but the 9th Lancashire Fusiliers and the 11th Manchester Regiment took them on with the bayonet, and fairly drove them back in disorder over the flaming Hill 10.

As the infantry were thus making good, the two Highland Mountain batteries and one battery, 59th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, were landed at B beach. Day was now breaking and with the dawn sailed into the bay six battalions of the 10th Division, under Brigadier-General Hill, from Mitylene,

Here perhaps I may be allowed to express may gratitude to the Royal Navy for their share in this remarkable achievement, as well as a very natural pride at staff arrangements, which resulted in the infantry of a whole division and three batteries being landed during a single night on a hostile shore, whilst the arrival of the first troops of the supporting division, from another base distant 130 miles, took place at the very psychological moment when support was most needed, namely, at break of dawn.

The intention of the Corps Commander was to keep the 10th Division on the left, and with it to push on as far forward as possible along the Kiretch Tepe Sirt towards the heights above Ejelmer Bay. He wished, therefore, to land these six battalions of the 10th Division at A beach and, seeing Brigadier-General Hill, he told him that as the left of the 34th Brigade was being hard pressed he should get into touch with General Officer Commanding, 11th Division, and work in support of his left until the arrival of his own Divisional General. But the naval authorities, so General Stopford reports, were unwilling, for some reason not specified, to land these troops at A beach, so that they had to be sent in lighters to C beach, whence they marched by Lala Baba to Hill 10, under fire. Hence were caused loss, delay and fatigue. Also the angle of direction from which these fresh troops entered the fight was not nearly so effective.

The remainder of the 10th Division, three battalions (from Madras), and with them the G. O. C. Lieutenant-General Sir B. Mahon, began to arrive, and the Naval authorities having discovered a suitable landing place near Ghazi Baba, these battalions were landed there together with one battalion of the 31st Brigade, which had not yet been sent round to "C" beach. By this means it was hoped that both the brigades of the 10th Division would be able to rendezvous about half a mile to the north-west of Hill 10.

After the defeat of the enemy round and about Hill 10, they retreated in an easterly direction towards Sulajik and Kuchuk Anafarta Ova, followed by the 34th and 32nd Brigades of the 11th Division and by the 31st Brigade of the 10th Division, which had entered into the fight, not as the Corps Commander had intended, on the left of the 11th Division, but between Hill 10 and the Salt Lake. I have failed in my endeavours to get some live human detail about the fighting which followed, but I understand from the Corps Commander that the brunt of it fell upon the 31st Brigade of the 10th (Irish) Division, which consisted of the 6th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, the 6th Royal Irish Fusiliers, and the 6th Royal Dublin Fusiliers, the last-named battalion being attached to the 31st Brigade.

By the evening General Hammersley had seized Yilghin Burnu (Chocolate Hills) after fight for which he specially commends the 6th Lincoln Regiment and the 6th Border Regiment. At the sametime he reported that he was unable to make any further progress towards the vital point, Ismail Oglu Tepe. At nightfall his brigade and the 31st Brigade were extended from about Hetman Chair through Chocolate Hills, Sulajik, to near Kuchuk Anafarta Ova.

This same day Sir B. Mahon delivered a spirited attack along the Kiretch Tepe Sirt ridge, in support of the 11th Battalion Manchester Regiment, and taking some small trenches en route, secured and established himself on a position extending from the sea about 135 p., through the high ground about the p., of Kiretch Tepe Sirt, to about 135 Z. 8. In front of him, on the ridge, he reported the enemy to be strongly entrenched. The 6th Royal Munster Fusiliers have been named as winning special distinction here. The whole advance was well carried out by the Irishmen over difficult ground against an enemy—500 to 700 Gendarmerie—favoured by the lie of the land.

The weather was very hot, and the new troops suffered much from want of water. Except at the southernmost extremity of the Kiretch Tepe Sirt ridge there was no water in that part of the field, and although it existed in some abundance throughout the area over which the 11th Division was operating, the Corps Commander reports that there was no time to develop its resources. Partly this seems to have been owing to the enemy's fire; partly to a want of that nous which stands by as second nature to the old campaigner; partly it was inevitable. Anyway, for as long as such a state of things lasted, the troops became dependent on the lighters and upon the water brought to the beaches in tins, pakhals, etc.

Undoubtedly the distribution of this water to the advancing troops was a matter of great difficulty, and one which required not only well-worked-out schemes from Corps and Divisional Staffs, but also energy and experience on the part of those who had to put them into practice. As it turned out, and judging merely by results, I regret to say that the measures actually taken in regard to the distribution proved to be inadequate, and that suffering and disorganisation ensued. The disembarkation of artillery horses was therefore at once, and rightly, postponed by the Corps Commander, in order that mules might be landed to carry up water.

And now General Stopford, recollecting the vast issues which hung upon his success in forestalling the enemy, urged his Divisional Commanders to push on. Otherwise, as he saw, all the advantages of the surprise landing must be nullified. But the Divisional Commanders believed themselves, it seems, to be unable to move. Their men, they said, were exhausted by their efforts of the night of the 6th-7th and by the action of the 7th. The want of water had told on the new troops. The distribution from the beaches had not worked smoothly. In some cases the hose had been pierced by individuals wishing to fill their own bottles; in others lighters had grounded so far from the beach that men swam out to fill batches of water bottles. All this had added to the disorganisation inevitable after a night landing, followed by fights here and there with an enemy scattered over a country to us unknown. These pleas for delay were perfectly well founded. But it seems to have been overlooked that the half-defeated Turks in front of us were equally exhausted and disorganised, and that an advance was the simplest and swiftest method of solving the water trouble and every other sort of trouble. Be this as it may, the objections overbore the Corps Commander's resolution. He had now got ashore three batteries (two of them mountain batteries), and the great guns of the ships were ready to speak at his request. But it was lack of artillery support which finally decided him to acquiesce in a policy of going slow which, by the time it reached the troops, became translated into a period of inaction. The Divisional Generals were, in fact, informed that "in view of the inadequate artillery support," General Stopford did not wish them to make frontal attacks on entrenched positions, but desired them, so far as was possible, to try and turn any trenches which were met with. Within the terms of this instruction lies the root of our failure to make use of the priceless daylight hours of the 8th of August.

Normally, it may be correct to say that in modern warfare infantry cannot be expected to advance without artillery preparation But in a landing on a hostile shore the order has to be inverted. The infantry must advance and seize a suitable position to cover the landing, and to provide artillery positions for the main thrust. The very existence of the force, its water-supply, its facilities for munitions and supplies, its power to reinforce, must absolutely depend on the infantry being able instantly to make good sufficient ground without the aid of the artillery other than can be supplied for the purpose by floating batteries.

This is not a condition that should take the commander of a covering force by surprise. It is one already foreseen. Driving power was required, and even a certain ruthlessness, to brush aside pleas for a respite for tired troops. The one fatal error was inertia. And inertia prevailed.

Late in the evening of the 7th the enemy had withdrawn the few guns which had been in action during the day. Beyond half a dozen shells dropped from very long range into the bay in the early morning of the 8th, no enemy artillery fired that day in the Suvla area. The guns had evidently been moved back, lest they should be captured when we pushed forward. As for the entrenched positions, these in the ordinary acceptance of the term, were non-existent. The General Staff Officer whom I had sent on to Suvla early in the morning of the 8th reported by telegraph the absence of hostile gun-fire, the small amount of rifle fire, and the enemy's apparent weakness. He also drew attention to the inaction of our own troops, and to the fact that golden opportunities were being missed. Before this message arrived at general headquarters I had made up my mind, from the Corps Commander's own reports, that all was not well at Suvla. There was risk in cutting myself adrift, even temporarily, from touch with the operations at Anzac and Helles; but I did my best to provide against any sudden call by leaving Major-General W. P. Braithwaite, my Chief of the General Staff, in charge, with instructions to keep me closely informed of events at the other two fronts; and having done this, I took ship and set out for Suvla.

On arrival at about 5 P.M. I boarded H.M.S. "Jonquil," where I found corps headquarters, and where General Stopford informed me that the General Officer Commanding, 11th Division, was confident of success in an attack he was to make at dawn next morning (the 9th). I felt no such confidence. Beyond a small advance by a part of the 11th Division between the Chocolate Hills and Ismail Ogli Tepe, and some farther progress along the Kiretch Tepe Sirt ridge by the 10th Division, the day of the 8th had been lost. The commander of the 11th Division had, it seems, ordered strong patrols to be pushed forward so as to make good all the strong positions in advance which could be occupied without serious fighting; but, as he afterwards reported, "little was done in this respect." Thus a priceless twelve hours had already gone to help the chances of the Turkish reinforcements which were, I knew, both from naval and aerial sources, actually on the march for Suvla. But when I urged that even now, at the eleventh hour, the 11th Division should make a concerted attack upon the hills, I was met by a non possumus. The objections of the morning were no longer valid; the men were now well rested, watered, and fed. But the divisional commanders disliked the idea of an advance by night, and General Stopford did not care, it seemed, to force their hands.

So it came about that I was driven to see whether I could not, myself, put concentration of effort and purpose into the direction of the large number of men ashore. The Corps Commander made no objection. He declared himself to be as eager as I could be to advance. The representations made by the Divisional Commanders had seemed to him insuperable. If I could see my way to get over them no one would be more pleased than himself.

Accompanied by Commodore Roger Keyes and Lieutenant-Colonel Aspinall, of the Headquarters General Staff, I landed on the beach, where all seemed quiet and peaceful, and saw the Commander of the 11th Division, Major-General Hammersley. I warned him the sands were running out fast, and that by dawn the high ground to his front might very likely be occupied in force by the enemy. He saw the danger, but declared that it was a physical impossibility, at so late an hour (6 P.M.), to get out orders for a night attack, the troops being very much scattered. There was no other difficulty now, but this was insuperable; he could not recast his orders or get them round to his troops in time. But one brigade, the 32nd, was, so General Hammersley admitted, more or less concentrated and ready to move. The General Staff Officer of the division, Colonel Neil Malcolm, a soldier of experience, on whose opinion I set much value, was consulted. He agreed that the 32nd Brigade was now in a position to act. I, therefore, issued a direct order that, even if it were only with this 32nd Brigade, the advance should begin at the earliest possible moment, so that a portion at least of the 11th Division should anticipate the Turkish reinforcements on the heights and dig themselves in there upon some good tactical point.

In taking upon myself the serious responsiblity of thus dealing with a detail of divisional tactics I was careful to limit the scope of the interference. Beyond directing that the one brigade which was reported ready to move at once should try and make good the heights before the enemy got on to them I did nothing, and said not a word calculated to modify or in any way affect the attack already planned for the morning. Out of the thirteen battalions which were to have advanced against the heights at dawn four were now to anticipate that movement by trying to make good the key of the enemy's position at once and under cover of darkness.

I have not been able to get a clear and coherent account of the doings of the 32nd Brigade; but I have established the fact that it did not actually commence its advance till 4 A.M. on the 9th of August. The reason given is that the units of the brigade were scattered. In General Stopford's despatch he says that, "One company of the 6th East Yorks Pioneer Battalion succeeded in getting to the top of the hill north of Anafarta Sagir, but the rest of the battalion and the 32nd Brigade were attacked from both flanks during their advance, and fell back to a line north and south of Sulajik. Very few of the leading company or the Royal Engineers who accompanied it got back, and that evening the strength of the battalion was nine officers and 380 men."

After their retirement from the hill north of Anafarta Sagir (which commanded the whole battlefield) this 32nd Brigade then still marked the high-water level of the advance made at dawn by the rest of the division. When their first retirement was completed they had to fall back further, so as to come into line with the most forward of their comrades. The inference seems clear. Just as the 32nd Brigade in their advance met with markedly less opposition than the troops who attacked an hour and a half later, so, had they themselves started earlier, they would probably have experienced less opposition. Further, it seems reasonable to suppose that had the complete division started at 4 A.M. on the 9th, or, better still, at 10 P.M. on the 8th, they would have made good the whole of the heights in front of them.

That night I stayed at Suvla, preferring to drop direct cable contact with my operations as a whole to losing touch with a corps battle which seemed to be going wrong.

At dawn on the 9th I watched General Hammersley's attack, and very soon realised by the well-sustained artillery fire of the enemy (so silent the previous day), and by the volume of the musketry, that Turkish reinforcements had arrived; that with the renewed confidence caused by our long delay the guns had been brought back; and that, after all, we were forestalled. This was a bad moment. Our attack failed; our losses were very serious. The enemy's enfilading shrapnel fire seemed to be especially destructive and demoralising, the shell bursting low and all along our line. Time after time it threw back our attack just as it seemed upon the point of making good. The 33rd Brigade at first made most hopeful progress in its attempt to seize Ismail Oglu Tepe. Some of the leading troops gained the summit, and were able to look over on to the other side. Many Turks were killed here. Then the centre seemed to give way. Whether this was the result of the shrapnel fire or whether as some say, an order to retire came up from the rear, the result was equally fatal to success. As the centre fell back the steady, gallant behaviour of the 6th Battalion, Border Regiment, and the 6th Battalion, Lincoln Regiment, on either flank was especially noteworthy. Scrub fires on Hill 70 did much to harass and hamper our troops. When the 32nd Brigade fell back before attacks from the slopes of the hill north of Anafarta Sagir and from the direction of Abrijka they took up the line north and south through Sulajik. Here their left was protected by two battalions of the 34th Brigade, which came up to their support. The line was later on prolonged by the remainder of the 34th Brigade and two battalions of the 159th Brigade of the 53rd Division. Their right was connected with the Chocolate Hills by the 33rd Brigade on the position to which they had returned after their repulse from the upper slopes of Ismail Oglu Tepe.

Some of the units which took part in this engagement acquitted themselves very bravely. I regret I have not had sufficient detail given me to enable me to mention them by name. The Divisional Commander speaks with appreciation of one freshly-landed battalion of the 53rd Division, a Hereford battalion, presumbly the 1-1st Herefordshire, which attacked with impetuosity and courage between Hetman Chair and Kaslar Chair, about Azmak Dere, on the extreme right of his line.

During the night of the 8th-9th and early morning of the 9th the whole of the 53rd (Territorial) Division (my general reserve) had arrived and disembarked. I had ordered it up to Suvla, hoping that by adding its strength to the 9th Corps General Stopford might still be enabled to secure the commanding ground round the bay. The infantry brigades of the 53rd Division (no artillery had accompanied it from England) reinforced the 11th Division.

On August 10th the Corps Commander decided to make another attempt to take the Anafarta ridge. The 11th Division were not sufficiently rested to play a prominent part in the operation, but the 53rd Division, under General Lindley, was to attack, supported by General Hammersley. On the 10th there were one brigade of Royal Field Artillery ashore, with two mountain batteries, and all the ships' guns were available to co-operate. But the attack failed though the Corps Commander considers that seasoned troops would have succeeded, especially as the enemy were showing signs of being shaken by our artillery fire. General Stopford points out, however, and rightly so, that the attack was delivered over very difficult country, and that it was a high trial for troops who had never been in action before, and with no regulars to set a standard. Many of the battalions fought with great gallantry, and were led forward with much devotion by their officers. At a moment when things were looking dangerous two battalions of the 11th Division (not specified by the Corps Commander) rendered very good service on the left of the Territorials. At the end of the day our troops occupied the line Hill east of Chocolate Hill—Sulajik, whilst the enemy—who had been ably commanded throughout—were still receiving reinforcements, and, apart from their artillery, were three times as strong as they had been on the 7th August.

Orders were issued to the General Officer Commanding 9th Corps to take up and entrench a line across the whole front from near the Azmak Dere, through the knoll east of the Chocolate Hill, to the ground held by the 10th Division about Kiretch Tepe Sirt. General Stopford took advantage of this opportunity to re-organise the divisions, and, as there was a gap in the line between the left of the 53rd Division, and the right of the 10th Division, gave orders for the preparation of certain strong points to enable it to be held.

The 54th Division (infantry only) arrived, and were disembarked on August 11th and placed in reserve. On the following day—August 12th—I proposed that the 54th Division should make a night march in order to attack, at dawn on the 13th, the heights Kavak Tepe—Teke Tepe. The Corps Commander having reason to believe that the enclosed country about Kuchuk Anafarta Ova and the north of it was held by the enemy, ordered one brigade to move forward in advance, and make good Kuchuk Anafarta Ova, so as to ensure an unopposed march for the remainder of the division as far as that place. So that afternoon the 163rd Brigade moved off, and, in spite of serious opposition, established itself about the A of Anafarta (118m. 4 and 7), in difficult and enclosed country. In the course of the fight, creditable in all respects to the 163rd Brigade, there happened a very mysterious thing. The 1-5th Norfolks were on the right of the line, and found themselves for a moment less strongly opposed than the rest of the brigade.

Against the yielding forces of the enemy Colonel Sir H. Beauchamp, a bold, self-confident officer, eagerly pressed forward followed by the best part of the battalion. The fighting grew hotter, and the ground became more wooded and broken. At this stage many men were wounded or grew exhausted with thirst. These found their way back to camp during the night. But the Colonel with 16 officers and 240 men, still kept pushing on, driving the enemy before him. Amongt these ardent souls was part of a fine company enlisted from the King's Sandringham estates. Nothing more was ever seen or heard of any of them. They charged into the forest, and were lost to sight or sound. Not one of them ever came back.

The night march and projected attack were now abandoned, owing to the Corps Commander's representations as to the difficulties of keeping the division supplied with food, water, etc., even should they gain the height. General Birdwood had hoped he would soon be able to make a fresh attack on Sari Bair, provided that he might reckon on a corresponding vigorous advance to be made by the 11th and 54th Divisions on Ismail Oglu Tepe. On August 13th I so informed General Stopford. But when it came to business General Birdwood found he could not yet carry out his new attack on Sari Bair—and, indeed, could only help the 9th Corps with one brigade from Damakjelik Bair. I was obliged, therefore, to abandon this project for the nonce, and directed General Stopford to confine his attention of strengthening his line across his present front. To straighten out the left of this line General Stopford ordered the General Officer Commanding the 10th Division to advance on the following day (15th August), so as to gain possession of the Kiretch Tepe Sirt, the 54th Division to co-operate.

The 30th and 31st Infantry Brigades of the 10th Irish Division were to attack frontally along the high ridge. The 162nd Infantry Brigade of the 54th Division were to support on the right. The infantry were to be seconded by a machine-gun detachment of the Royal Naval Air Service, by the guns of H.M.S. "Grampus," and H.M.S. "Foxhound" from the Gulf of Saros, by the Argyll Mountain Battery, the 15th Heavy Battery, and the 58th Field Battery. After several hours of indecisive artillery and musketry fighting, the 6th Royal Dublin Fusiliers charged forward with loud cheers, and captured the whole ridge, together with eighteen prisoners. The vigorous support rendered by the naval guns was a feature of this operation. Unfortunately, the point of the ridge was hard to hold, and means for maintaining the forward trenches had not been well thought out. Casualties became very heavy, the 5th Royal Irish Fusiliers having only one officer left, and the 5th Inniskilling Fusiliers also losing heavily in officers. Reinforcements were promised, but before they could arrive the officer left in command decided to evacuate the front trenches. The strength of the Turks opposed to us was steadily rising, and had had now reached 20,000.

On the evening of the August 15th General Stopford handed over cammand of the 9th Corps.

The units of the 10th and 11th Divisions had shown their mettle when they leaped into the water to get more quickly to close quarters, or when they stormed Lala Baba in the darkness. They had shown their resolution later when they tackled the Chocolate Hills and drove the enemy from Hill 10 right back out of rifle range from the beaches.

Then had come hesitation. The advantage had not been pressed. The senior Commanders at Suvla had had no personal experience of the new trench warfare; of the Turkish methods; of the paramount importance of time. Strong, clear leadership had not been promptly enough applied. These were the reasons which induced me, with your Lordship's approval, to appoint Major-General H. de B. De Lisle to make over temporary command.

I had already seen General De Lisle on his way from Cape Helles, and my formal instructions—full copy in Appendix—were handed to him by my Chief of the General Staff. Under these he was to make it is most pressing business to get the Corps into fighting trim again, so that as big a proportion of it as possible might be told off for a fresh attack upon Ismail Oglu Tepe and the Anafarta spur. At his disposal were placed the 10th Division (less one brigade), the 11th Division, the 53rd and 54th Divisions—a force imposing enough on paper, but totalling, owing to casualties, under 30,000 rifles.

The fighting strength of ourselves and our adversaries stood at this time at about the following figures:—Lieutenant-General Birdwood commanded 25,000 rifles at Anzac; Lieutenant-General Davies, in the southern zone, commanded 23,000 rifles; whilst the French corps alongside of him consisted o some 17,000 rifles. The Turks had been very active in the south, doubtless to prevent us reinforcing Anzac or Suvla ; but it is doubtful if there were more than 35,000 of them in that region. The bulk of the enemy were engaged against Anzac or were in reserve in the valleys east and north of Sari Bair. Their strength was estimated at 75,000 rifles.

The Turks then, I reckoned, had 110,000 rifles to our 95,000, and held all the advantages of ground; they had plenty of ammunition, also drafts wherewith to refill ranks depleted in action within two or three days. My hopes that these drafts would be of poor qualify had been every time disappointed. After weighing all these points, I sent your Lordship a long cable. In it I urged that if the campaign was to be brought to a quick, victorious decision, large reinforcements must at once be sent out. Autumn, I pointed out, was already upon us, and there was not a moment to be lost. At that time (August 16th) my British divisions alone were 45,000 under establishment, and some of my fine battalions had dwindled down so far that I had to withdraw them from the fighting line. Our most vital need was the replenishment of these sadly depleted ranks. When that was done I wanted 50,000 fresh rifles. From what I knew of the Turkish situation, both in its local and general aspects, it seemed, humanly speaking, a certainty that if this help could be sent to be at once we could still clear a passage for our fleet to Constantinople.

It may be judged, then, how deep was my disappointment when I learnt that the essential drafts, reinforcements and munitions could not be sent to me, the reason given being one which prevented me from any further insistence. So I resolved to do my very best with the means at my disposal, and forthwith reinforced the northern wing with the 2nd Mounted Division (organised as dismounted troops from Egypt and the 29th Division from the southern area. These movements, and the work of getting the 9th Corps and attached divisions into battle array took time, and it was not until the 21st that I was ready to renew the attack—an attack to be carried out under very different conditions from those of the 7th and 8th August.

The enemy's positions were now being rapidly entrenched, and, as I could not depend on receiving reinforcing drafts, I was faced with the danger that if I could not drive the Turks back I might lose so many men that I would find myself unable to hold the very extensive new area of ground which had been gained. I therefore decided to mass every available man against Ismail Oglu Tepe, a sine qua non to my plans whether as a first step towards clearing the valley, or, if this proved impossible, towards securing Suvla Bay and Anzac Cove from shell fire.

The scheme for this attack was well planned by General De Lisle. The 53rd and 54th Divisions were to hold the enemy from Sulajik to Kiretch Tepe Sirt while the 29th Division and 11th Division stormed Ismail Oglu Tepe. Two brigades, 10th Division and the 2nd Mounted Division, were retained in Corps Reserve. I arranged that General Birdwood should cooperate by swinging forward his left flank to Susuk Kuyu and Kaiajik Aghala. Naturally I should have liked still further to extend the scope of my attack by ordering an advance of the 9th Corps all along their line, but many of the battalions had been too highly tried, and I felt it was unwise to call upon them for another effort so soon. The attack would only be partial, but it was an essential attack if any real progress was to be made. Also, once the Anafarta ridge was in my hands the enemy would be unable to reinforce through the gap between the two Anafartas, and then, so I believed, my left would find no difficulty in getting on.

My special objective was the hill which forms the south-west corner of the Anafarta Sagir spur. Ismail Oglu Tepe, as it is called, forms a strong natural barrier against an invader from the Ægean who might wish to march direct against the Anafartas. The hill rises 350 feet from the plain, with steep spurs jutting out to the west and south-west, the whole of it covered with dense holly oak scrub, so nearly impenetrable that it breaks up an attack and forces troops to move in single file along goat tracks between the bushes. The comparatively small number of guns landed up to date was a weakness, seeing we had now to storm trenches, but the battleships were there to back us, and as the bombardment was limited to a narrow front of a mile it was hoped the troops would find themselves able to carry the trenches and that the impetus of the charge would carry them up to the top of the crest. Our chief difficulty lay in the open nature and shallow depth of the ground available for the concentration for attack. The only cover we possessed was the hill Lala Baba, 200 yards from the sea, and Yilghin Burnu, half a mile from the Turkish front, the ground between these two being an exposed plain. The 29th Division, which was to make the attack on the left, occupied the front trenches during the preceding night; the 11th Division, which was to attack on the right, occupied the front trenches on the right of Yilghin Burnu.

By some freak of nature Suvla Bay and plain were wrapped in a strange mist on the afternoon of the 21st of August. This was sheer bad luck, as we had reckoned on the enemy's gunners being blinded by the declining sun and upon the Turkish trenches being shown up by the evening light with singular clearness, as would have been the case on ninety-nine days out of a hundred. Actually we could hardly see the enemy lines this afternoon, whereas out to the westward targets stood out in strong relief against the luminous mist. I wished to postpone the attack, but for various reasons this was not possible, and so, from 2-30 P.M. to 3 P.M., a heavy but none too accurate artillery bombardment from land and sea was directed against the Turkish first line of trenches, whilst twenty-four machine-guns in position on Yilghin Burnu did what they could to lend a hand.

At 3 P.M., an advance was begun by the infantry on the right of the line. The 34th Brigade of the 11th Division rushed the Turkish trenches between Hetman Chair and Aire Kavak, practically without loss, but the 32nd Brigade, directed against Hetman Chair and the communication trench connecting that point with the south-west corner of the Ismail Oglu Tepe spur, failed to make good its point. The brigade had lost direction in the first instance, moving north-east instead of east, and though it attempted to carry the communication trench from the north-east with great bravery and great disregard of life, it never succeeded in rectifying the original mistake. The 33rd Brigade, sent up in haste with orders to capture this communication trench at all costs, fell into precisely the same error, part of it marching north-east and part south-east to Susuk Kuyu.

Meanwhile the 29th Division, whose attack had been planned for 3-30 P.M., had attacked Scimitar Hill (Hill 70) with great dash. The 87th Brigade, on the left, carried the trenches on Scimitar Hill, but the 86th Brigade were checked and upset by a raging forest fire across their front. Eventually pressing on, they found themselves unable to advance up the valley between the two spurs owing to the failure of the 32nd Brigade of the 11th Division on their right. The brigade then tried to attack eastwards, but were decimated by a cross fire of shell and musketry from the north and south-east. The leading troops were simply swept off the top of the spur, and had to fall back to a ledge south-west of Scimitar Hill, where they found a little cover. Whilst this fighting was in progress the 2nd Mounted Division moved out from Lala Baba in open formation to take up a position of readiness behind Yilghin Burnu. During this march they came under a remarkably steady and accurate artillery fire. The advance of these English Yeomen was a sight calculated to send a thrill of pride through anyone with a drop of English blood running in their veins. Such superb martial spectacles are rare in modern war. Ordinarily it should always be possible to bring up reserves under some sort of cover from shrapnel fire. Here, for a mile and a half, there was nothing to conceal a mouse, much less some of the most stalwart soldiers England has ever sent from her shores. Despite the critical events in other parts of the field, I could hardly take my glasses from the Yeomen; they moved like men marching on parade. Here and there a shell would take toll of a cluster; there they lay; there was no straggling; the others moved steadily on; not a man was there who hung back or hurried. But such an ordeal must consume some of the battle-winning fighting energy of those subjected to it, and it is lucky indeed for the Turks that the terrain, as well as the lack of trenches, forbade us from letting the 2nd Mounted Division loose at close quarters to the enemy without undergoing this previous too heavy baptism of fire.

Now that the 11th Division had made their effort, and failed, the 2nd South Midland Brigade (commanded by Brigadier-General Earl of Longford) was sent forward from its position of readiness behind Yilghin Burnu, in the hope that they might yet restore the fortunes of the day. This brigade, in action for the first time, encountered both bush fires and musketry without flinching, but the advance had in places to be almost by inches, and the actual close attack by the Yeomen did not take place until night was fast falling. On the left they reached the foremost line of the 29th Division, and on the right also they got as far as the leading battalions. But, as soon as it was dark, one regiment pushed up the valley between Scimitar Hill and Hill 100 (on Ismail Oglu Tepe), and carried the trenches on a small knoll near the centre of this horseshoe. The regiment imagined it had captured Hill 100, which would have been a very notable success, enabling as it would the whole of our line to hang on and dig in. But when the report came in some doubt was felt as to its accuracy, and a reconnaissance by staff officers showed that the knoll was a good way from Hill 100, and that a strongly-held semi-circle of Turkish trenches (the enemy having been heavily reinforced) still denied us access to the top of the hill. As the men were too done, and had lost too heavily to admit of a second immediate assault, and as the knoll actually held would have been swept by fire at daybreak, there was nothing for it but to fall back under cover of darkness to our original line. The losses in this attack fell most heavily on the 29th Division. They were just under 5,000.

I am sorry not to be able to give more detail as to the conduct of individuals and units during this battle. But the 2nd South Midland Brigade has been brought to my notice, and it consisted of the Bucks Yeomanry, the Berks Yeomanry and the Dorset Yeomanry. The Yeomanry fought very bravely, and on personal, as well as public, grounds I specially deplore the loss of Brigadier-General Earl of Longford, K.P., M.V.O., and Brigadier-General P. A. Kenna, V.C., D.S.O., A.D.C.

The same day, as pre-arranged with General Birdwood, a force consisting of two battalions of New Zealand Mounted Rifles, two battalions of the 29th Irish Brigade, the 4th South Wales Borderers, and 29th Indian Infantry Brigade, the whole under the command of Major-General H. V. Cox, was working independently to support the main attack.

General Cox divided his force into three sections; the left section to press forward and establish a permanent hold on the existing lightly-held outpost line covering the junction of the 11th Division with the Anzac front; the centre section to seize the well at Kabak Kuyu, an asset of utmost value, whether to ourselves or the enemy; the right section to attack and capture the Turkish trenches on the north-east side of the Kaiajik Aghala.

The advance of the left section was a success; after a brisk engagement the well at Kabak Kuyu was seized by the Indian Brigade, and, by 4-30, the right column, under Brigade-General Russell, under heavy fire, effected a lodgment on the Kaiajik Aghala, where our men entrenched, and began to dig communications across the Kaiajik Dere towards the lines of the 4th Australian Brigade south of the Dere. A pretty stiff bomb fight ensued, in which General Russell's troops held their own through the night against superior force. At 6 A.M. on the morning of the 22nd August General Russell, reinforced by the newly-arrived 18th Australian Battalion, attacked the summit of the Kaiajik Aghala. The Australians carried 150 yards of the trenches, losing heavily in so doing, and were then forced to fall back again owing to enfilade fire, though in the meantime the New Zealand Mounted Rifle managed, in spite of constant counter-attacks, to make good another 80 yards. A counter-attack in strength launched by the Turks at 10 A.M., was repulsed; the new line from the Kaiajik Aghala to Susuk Kuyu was gradually strengthened, and eventually joined on the right of the 9th Army Corps, thereby materially improving the whole situation. During this action the 4th Australian Brigade, which remained facing the Turks on the upper part of the Kaiajik Aghala, was able to inflict several hundred casualties on the enemy as they retreated or endeavoured to reinforce.

On the 21st of August we had carried the Turkish entrenchments at several points, but had been unable to hold what we had gained except along the section where Major-General Cox had made a good advance with Anzac and Indian troops. To be repulsed is not to be defeated, as long as the commander and his troops are game to renew the attack. All were eager for such a renewal of the offensive; but clearly we would have for some time to possess our souls in patience, seeing that re-inforcements and munitions were short, that we were already outnumbered by the enemy, and that a serious outbreak of sickness showed how it had become imperative to give a spell of rest to the men who had been fighting so magnificently and so continuously. To calculate on rest, it may be suggested was to calculate without the enemy. Such an idea has no true bearing on the feelings of the garrison of the peninsula. That the Turks should attack had always been the earnest prayer of all of us, just as much after the August 21st as before it. And now that we had to suspend progress for a bit, work was put in hand upon the line from Suvla to Anzac, a minor offensive routine of sniping and bombing was organised, and, in a word, trench warfare set in on both sides.

On August 24th Lieutenant-General the Hon. J. H. G. Byng, K.C.M.G., C.B., M.V.O., assumed command of the 9th Army Corps.

The last days of the month were illumined by a brilliant affair carried through by the troops under General Birdwood's command. Our object was to complete the capture of Hill 60 north of the Kaiajik Aghala, commenced by Major-General Cox on the August 21st. Hill 60 overlooked the Biyuk Anafarta valley, and was therefore tactically a very important feature.

The conduct of the attack was again entrusted to Major-General Cox, at whose disposal were placed detachments from the 4th and 5th Australian Brigades, the New Zealand Mounted Rifles Brigade, and the 5th Connaught Rangers. The advance was timed to take place at 5 P.M. on the 27th of August, after the heaviest artillery bombardment we could afford. This bombardment seemed effective; but the moment the assailants broke cover they were greeted by an exceeding hot fire from the enemy field guns, rifles, and machine-guns, followed after a brief interval by a shower of heavy shell, some of which, most happily, pitched into the trenches of the Turks. On the right the detachment from the 4th and 5th Australian Brigades could make no headway against a battery of machine-guns which confronted them. In the centre the New Zealanders made a most determined onslaught, and carried one side of the topmost knoll. Hand-to-hand fighting continued here till 9-30 P.M. when it was reported that nine-tenths of the summit had been gained. On the left the 250 men of the 5th Connaught Rangers excited the admiration of all beholders by the swiftness and cohesion of their charge. In five minutes they had carried their objective, the northern Turkish communications, when they at once set to and began a lively bomb-fight along the trenches against strong parties which came hurrying up from the enemy supports and afterwards from their reserves. At midnight fresh troops were to have strengthened our grip upon the hill, but before that hour the Irishmen had been out-bombed, and the 9th Australian Light Horse, who had made a most plucky attempt to recapture the lost communication trench, had been repulsed Luckily, the New Zealand Mounted Rifles refused to recognize that they were worsted. Nothing would shift them. All that night and all next day, through bombing, bayonet charges, musketry, shrapnel, and heavy shell, they hung on to their 150 yards of trench. At 1 A.M. on August 29th the 10th Light Horse made another attack on the lost communication trenches to the left, carried them, and finally held them. This gave us complete command of the underfeature, an outlook over the Anafarta Sagir valley, and safer lateral communications between Anzac and Suvla Bay.

Our casualties in this hotly contested affair amounted to 1,000. The Turks lost out of all proportion more. Their line of retreat was commanded from our Kaiajik Dere trenches, whence our observers were able to direct artillery fire equally upon their fugitives and their reinforcements. The same observers estimated the Turkish casualties as no less than 5,000. Three Turkish machine-guns and forty-six prisoners were taken, as well as three trench mortars, 300 Turkish rifles, 60,000 rounds of ammunition, and 500 bombs. Four hundred acres were added to the territories of Anzac. Major-General Cox showed his usual forethought and wisdom. Brigadier-General Russell fought his men splendidly.

My narrative of battle incidents must end here. From this date onwards up to the date of my departure on October 17th the flow of munitions and drafts fell away. Sickness, the legacy of a desperately trying summer, took heavy toll of the survivors of so many arduous conflicts. No longer was there any question of operations on the grand scale, but with such troops it was difficult to be downhearted. All ranks were cheerful; all remained confident that, so long as they stuck to their guns, their country would stick to them, and see them victoriously through the last and greatest of the crusades.

On the October 11th your Lordship cabled asking me for an estimate of the losses which would be involved in an evacuation of the peninsula. On the October 12th I replied in terms showing that such a step was to me unthinkable. On the October 16th I received a cable recalling me to London for the reason, as I was informed by your Lordship on my arrival, that His Majesty's Government desired a fresh, unbiased opinion, from a responsible Commander, upon the question of early evacuation.

In bringing this dispatch to a close I wish to refer gratefully to the services rendered by certain formations, whose work has so far only been recognized by a sprinkling of individual rewards.

Much might be written on the exploits of the Royal Naval Air Service, but these bold flyers are laconic, and their feats will mostly pass unrecorded. Yet let me here thank them, with their Commander, Colonel F. H Sykes, of the Royal Marines, for the nonchalance with which they appear to affront danger and death, when and where they can. So doing, they quicken the hearts of their friends on land and sea—an asset of greater military value even than their bombs or aerial reconnaissances, admirable in all respects as these were.

With them I also couple the Service de l'Aviation of the Corps Expeditionnaire d'Orient, who daily wing their way in and out of the shrapnel under the distinguished leadership of M. le Capitaine Césari.

The Armoured Car Division (Royal Naval Air Service) have never failed to respondent to any call which might be made upon them. Their organisation was broken up; their work had to be carried out under strange conditions—from the bows of the "River Clyde," as independent batteries attached to infantry divisions, etc., etc.—and yet they were always cheerful, always ready to lend a hand in any sort of fighting that might give them a chance of settling old scores with the enemy.

Next I come to the Royal Artillery. By their constant vigilance, by their quick grasp of the key to every emergency, by their thundering good shooting, by hundreds of deeds of daring, they have earned the unstinted admiration of all their comrade services. Where all fought so remarkably the junior officers deserve a little niche of their own in the Dardanelles record of fame. Their audacity in reconnaissance, their insouciance under the hotest of fires, stand as a fine example not only to the Army, but to the nation at large.

A feature of every report, narrative or diary I have read has been a tribute to the stretcher bearers. All ranks, from Generals in command to wounded men in hospital, are unanimous in their praise. I have watched a party from the moment when the telephone summoned them from their dug-out to the time when they returned with their wounded. To see them run lightheartedly across fire-swept slopes is to be privileged to witness a superb example of the hero in man. No braver corps exists, and I believe the reason to be that all thought of self is instinctively flung aside when the saving of others is the motive.

The services rendered by Major-General (temporary Lieutenant-General) E. A. Altham, C.B., C.M.G., Inspector-General of Communications, and all the Departments and Services of the Lines of Communication assured us a life-giving flow of drafts, munitions and supplies. The work was carried out under unprecedented conditions, and is deserving, I submit, of handsome recognition.

With General Altham were associated Brigadier-General (temporary Major-General) C. R. R. McGrigor, C.B., at first Commandant of the Base at Alexandria and later Deputy Inspector-General of Communications, and Colonel T. E. O'Leary, Deputy Adjutant-General, 3rd Echelon. Both of these officers carried out their difficult duties to my entire satisfaction.

My Military Secretary, Lieutenant-Colonel S. H. Pollen, has displayed first-class ability in the conduct of his delicate and responsible duties.

Also I take the opportunity of my last dispatch to mention two of my Aides-de-Camp—Major F. L. Magkill-Crichton-Maitland, Gordon Highlanders, Lieutenant Hon. G. St. J. Brodrick, Surrey Yeomanry.

I have many other names to bring to notice for distinguished and gallant service during the operations under review, and these will form the subject of a separate communication.

And now, before affixing to this dispatch my final signature as Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force, let me first pay tribute to the everlasting memory of my dear comrades who will return no more. Next, let me thank each and all, Generals, Staff, Regimental Leaders, and rank and file, for their wonderful loyalty, patience, and self-sacrifice. Our progress was constant, and if it was painfully slow—they know the truth. So I bid them all farewell with a special God-speed to the campaigners who have served with me right through from the terrible yet most glorious earlier days—the incomparable 29th Division; the young veterans of the Naval Division; the ever-victorious Australians and New Zealanders; the stout East Lancs, and my own brave fellow-countrymen of the Lowland Division of Scotland.

I have the honour to be,

Your Lordship's most obedient servant,

IAN HAMILTON,

General, Commander-in-Chief,

Mediterranean Expeditionary Force.

J. H. KERR,
Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor-General on the 8th March, 1916, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. III OF 1916.

An Act to provide for the trial, by court-martial, of foreigners for offences against the Defence of India Rules.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the trial, by court-martial, of foreigners for offences against the Defence of India Rules; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title, extent and duration.

1. (1) This Act may be called the "Foreigners' (Trial by Court-martial) Act, 1916."

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, the Sonthal Parganas, and the district of Angul.

(3) It shall be in force during the continuance of the present war and for a period of six months thereafter :

Provided that the expiration of this Act shall not affect the validity of anything done in pursuance of it, and any person convicted under this Act may be punished as if it had continued in force, and all prosecutions and other legal proceedings pending under this Act at the time of the expiration thereof may be completed and carried into effect and the sentences carried into execution as if this Act had not expired.

Definitions.

2. In this Act—

(a) 'British Subject" has the same meaning as in section 27 of the 4 & British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914;

Provided that any person who holds a certificate of naturalization as a British subject granted under any Act of the Governor-General in Council for the time being in force shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a British subject.

IV of 1915. (b) "Defence of India Rules" means any rules for the time being in force made under section 2 of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915.

(c) "Foreigner" means any person who is not a British subject.

Trial of foreigners contravening rules under section 2 of the Defence of India Act, 1915.

3. (1) The Governor-General in Council may, by order in writing, direct that a foreigner accused of anything which is an offence in virtue of the Defence of India Rules shall be tried by court-martial.

(2) An order made under sub-section (1) may be made in respect of all foreigners or any particular foreigner or any class of foreigners, and in respect of all offences against the said rules or any particular offence or any class of offences.

(3) An order made under sub-section (1) may be made in respect of, or include, any foreigner so accused whether such offence was committed before or after the commencement of this Act.

Procedure on making of order under section 3.

4. When an order under section 3 has been made in respect of, or includes, any foreigner, such foreigner, when so accused, may be taken into military custody, and shall, if he is already in other custody, be handed over to military custody, and shall be proceeded against and dealt with as if he was a person subject to military law in accordance with the Army Act, and as if the offence of which he is accused was an offence against military law; and may, on conviction, be sentenced to, and shall be liable to suffer, any punishment assigned by the Defence of India Rules for the offence of which he is found guilty.

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

Procedure on trial.

5. The trial and all matters precedent thereto and attendant thereon shall be held and carried out in accordance with the provisions of the Army Act and the rules for the time being in force thereunder:

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58

Provided that the Governor-General in Council may, by general or special order, modify, in such way as he may direct, any of the said provisions.

III of 1916.

Repeal of Ordinance III of 1916.

6. The Foreigners (Trial by Court-martial) Ordinance, 1916, is hereby repealed.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

IN time of war the speedy and drastic punishment of acts by alien enemies injurious to the State and especially of offences relating to the collection and communication of information of such a nature as may be directly or indirectly useful to an enemy is a matter of great military importance. Accordingly, the Governor-General recently promulgated an Ordinance providing that any person other than a British subject accused of an offence against the Defence of India Rules might be proceeded against and dealt with as if he were a person subject to Military Law in accordance with the Army Act, and as if the offence of which he was accused was an offence against Military Law. The Ordinance further provided that such person on conviction would be liable to suffer any punishment assigned by the Defence of India Rules for the offence of which he might be found guilty and that the trial and all matters precedent thereto would be carried out in accordance with the provisions of the Army Act subject to any modifications which the Governor-General in Council might direct.

This Ordinance will have currency for six months only, and the object of the present Bill is to make the provisions of the Ordinance operative for the period of the war and six months thereafter, as has already been done in the case of other Ordinances passed to deal with emergencies which have arisen out of the present war.

BEAUCHAMP DUFF.

DELHI;
The 3rd March 1916.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

Published in FOUR SERIES viz.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt: and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

Caution when Approaching British Ports.

No. 46 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1 of 1916), are republished :—

PART I.

CLOSING OF PORTS.

Former Notice.—No. 700 of 1915. (This Office No. 250 of 1915.)

(1) My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, having taken into consideration the fact that it may be necessary to forbid all entrance to certain ports of the Empire, this is to give Notice that on approaching the shores of the United Kingdom, or any of the ports or localities of the British Empire, referred to in Part III of this Notice, a sharp look-out should be kept for the signals described in the following paragraph, and for the vessels mentioned in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice, and the distinguishing and other signals made by them. In the event of such signals being displayed, the port or locality should be approached with great caution, as it may be apprehended that obstructions may exist.

(2) If entrance to a port is prohibited, three red vertical lights by night, or three red vertical balls by day, will be exhibited in some conspicuous position, in or near to its approach, which signals will also be shown by the vessels indicated in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice.

If these signals are displayed, vessels must either proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

(3) At all the ports or localities at home or abroad referred to in Part III of this Notice, search-lights are occasionally exhibited for exercise.

Instructions have been given to avoid directing moveable search-lights during practice on to vessels under way, but mariners are warned that great care should be taken to keep a sharp look-out for the signals indicated in paragraph (2) above, when search-lights are observed to be working.

PART II.

EXAMINATION SERVICE.

(4) In certain circumstances it is also necessary to take special measures to examine vessels desiring to enter the ports or localities at home or abroad, referred to in Part III of this Notice.

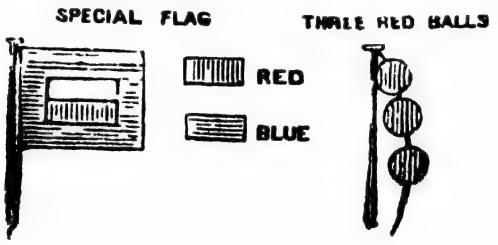
(5) In such case, vessels carrying the distinguishing flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7) will be charged with the duty of examining ships which desire to enter the ports and of allotting positions in which they shall anchor. If Government vessels, or vessels belonging to the local port authority, are found patrolling in the offing, merchant vessels are advised to communicate with such vessels with a view to obtaining information as to the course on which they should approach the Examination Anchorage. Such communication will not be necessary in cases where the pilot on board has already received this information from the local authorities.

(6) As the institution of the Examination Service at any port will never be publicly advertised, especial care should be taken in approaching the ports, by day or night, to keep a sharp look-out for any vessel carrying the flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7), and to be ready to "bring to" at once when hailed by her or warned by the firing of a gun or sound rocket.

In entering by night any of the ports mentioned in Part III, serious delay and risk will be avoided if four efficient all round lamps, two red and two white, are kept available for use.

(7) By day the distinguishing flags of the Examination Steamer will be a special flag (white and red horizontal surrounded by a blue border) and a blue ensign.

Also, three red vertical balls if the port is closed.



By night the steamer will carry :—

(a) Three red vertical lights if the port is closed.
(b) Three white vertical lights if the port is open.

The above lights will be carried in addition to the ordinary navigation lights, and will show an unbroken light around the horizon.

(8) Masters are warned that, when approaching a British port where the Examination Service is in force, they must have the distinguishing signal of their vessel ready to hoist immediately the Examination Steamer makes the signal.

(9) Masters are warned that, before attempting to enter any of these ports when the Examination Service is in force, they must in their own interests strictly obey all instructions given to them by the Examination Steamer. In the absence of any instructions from the Examination Steamer they must proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

Whilst at anchor in the Examination Anchorage, Masters are warned that they must not lower any boats (except to avoid accident), communicate with the shore, work cables, move the ship, or allow anyone to leave the ship, without permission from the Examination Steamer.

(10) In case of fog, Masters are enjoined to use the utmost care, and the Examination Anchorage itself should be approached with caution.

(11) Merchant vessels when approaching ports are especially cautioned against making use of private signals of any description, either by day or night; the use of them will render a vessel liable to be fired on.

(12) The pilots attached to the ports will be acquainted with the regulations to be followed.

PART IV.

SWEEPING OPERATIONS.

H.M. Vessels are constantly engaged in sweeping operations off ports in the United Kingdom.

Whilst so engaged, they work in pairs connected by a wire hawser, and are consequently hampered to a very considerable extent in their manœuvring powers.

With a view to indicating the nature of the work on which these vessels are engaged, they will show the following signals:—

A black ball at the foremast head and a similar ball at the yardarm, or where it can best be seen, on that side on which it is dangerous for vessels to pass.

For the public safety, all other vessels, whether steamers or sailing craft, must keep out of the way of vessels flying this signal, and should especially remember that it is dangerous to pass between the vessels of a pair.

MONTHLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT OF BENGAL FOR FEBRUARY 1916.

1. Character of the Season.—During the last week of the month under review light scattered showers fell almost all over the province The fall was in defect of the normal everywhere excepting in a few Northern Bengal districts. The usual rainfall statement is appended.

II. Progress of Agricultural operations.—The harvesting of potatoes, pulses and other spring crops was in progress. Lands were being prepared for the next autumn crops. Cutting and pressing of sugarcane for gur making was proceeding.

III.—State of Standing Crops.—Continued absence of rainfall interfered with the growth of the standing spring crops. The light rainfall during the latter part of the month, however, somewhat improved their condition.

IV. Prospects and probable Outturn.—Owing to the insufficiency of moisture in the fields the prospects of wheat, gram and other spring crops were reported to be only fair. The prospects of the mango crops were promising.

V. Damage to standing Crops.—No damage to standing crops was reported during the month.

VI.—Condition of Agricultural Stock.—The condition of agricultural stock was fairly good. The number of districts in which cattle-disease prevailed during the month varied from three to six.

VII. Failure of Pasturage and Fodder.—Fodder was getting scarce in the districts of Bankura and Noakhali.

VIII. Prices of Food-grains.—During the second fortnight of the month under review the price of common rice rose in two districts, also fell in two and remained stationary in the rest. It varied from seven seers a rupee at Hooghly to ten seers a rupee at Jalpaiguri.

IX.—Condition of Agricultural People.—The distress among the agricultural population in Bankura tended to increase during the month. In the Tippera district the condition of the people in the affected areas was generally unchanged. Relief measures were continued. Private charitable bodies were also giving assistance.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 13th March 1916.

Summary.—No rain fell during the week. The preparation of fields for jute and other autumn crops continues, but the progress of the operations is retarded for want of rain. Harvesting of potatoes, oilseeds and other spring crops is proceeding and that of sugarcane is nearing completion. Sowing of jute and autumn paddy is going on in low lands in certain districts. The prospects of the spring crops are not very satisfactory on account of the prolonged drought. Scarcity of fodder is being felt in Bankura. Cattle-disease is reported from seven districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has slightly fallen as compared with that of the previous week.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA TRADE FLUCTUATIONS.

THE following tables are intended to show the trade of the Calcutta Block* in certain selected articles during the months of April to October 1915 by all routes, i.e., by rail, river, canal, road and sea. The statistics have been compiled from returns furnished by the Collector of Customs, Calcutta, Railway Audit Offices, Steamer Companies, the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, the District Magistrates of the 24-Parganas and Howrah, and the Assistant Engineer, Calcutta Canals.

Imports.

The principal articles imported into Calcutta by rail, river, canal, road and sea (coastwise) during April to October 1915, as against the corresponding months of 1914, show (in round numbers) an increase of—

100 per cent. in paddy (3,623,000 maunds as against 1,815,000 maunds),
104 per cent. in jute raw (3,640,000 bales as against 1,782,000 bales),
80 per cent. in wheat (4,766,000 maunds as against 2,653,000 maunds),
9 per cent. in rice (12,425,000 maunds as against 11,416,000 maunds),
23 per cent. in gunny-bags (188 million bags as against 153 millions),
4 per cent. in Indian piece-goods† (Rs. 1,01,84,000 as against Rs. 97,79,000), 48 per cent. in indigo (1,706 maunds as against 1,154 maunds).

22 per cent. in coal and coke (64,828,000 maunds as against 83,827,000 maunds).

Shipments from Burma of paddy and rice rose from 817,000 maunds and 7,112,000 maunds in April to October 1914 to 2,320,000 maunds and 9,052,000 maunds, respectively, in the corresponding months of 1915. Exports of jute, especially from Rangpur, Dacca, Mymensingh, Faridpur and Bihar and Orissa increased during the same periods from 1,120,000 bales to 2,148,000 bales; of wheat from the United Provinces increased from 1,028,000 maunds to 3,204,000 maunds; of gunny-bags from Hooghly and the 24-Parganas from 151 millions bags to 184 millions; and of Indian piece-goods from Bombay and Madras from Rs. 64,84,000 to Rs. 74,04,000.

Exports of coal and coke from Burdwan decreased from 37,059,000 maunds in April to October 1914 to 31,228,000 maunds in the corresponding period of 1915, and from Bihar and Orissa from 46,384,000 maunds to 33,519,000 maunds.

Owing to smaller shipments mainly from Bombay during April to October 1915 the imports by sea (foreign and coastwise) into Calcutta of Indian cotton piece-goods, decreased by 83 per cent (Rs. 3,09,227 as against Rs. 18,02,887 last year).

Exports.

The exports by sea (foreign and coastwise) from Calcutta of rice show a fall of 62 per cent. on account of smaller shipments principally to foreign countries other than the United Kingdom (1,107,000 maunds in April to October 1915 as against 2,912,000 maunds in the corresponding months of 1914), and the decrease of 32 per cent. in the exports of coal and coke is due chiefly to smaller shipments to Bombay, Sind and Madras (8,834,000 maunds as against 23,133,000 maunds last year). Owing to larger shipments to the United Kingdom (264,000 maunds as against 3,266 maunds last year) exports of wheat rose by 360 per cent. The exports of raw jute to the United Kingdom increased from 357,000 bales last year to 686,000 bales. Shipments of gunny-bags to foreign countries other than the United Kingdom increased by about 110 million bags, and those to the United Kingdom increased from 21 million bags in April to October 1914 to 181 million bags in April to October 1915 and to Burma from 13 million bags to 17 million bags.

* Calcutta Block consists of the town of Calcutta with Howrah and Kidderpore Docks.
† Excluding imports coastwise.

Exports by rail, river, canal, road and sea (coastwise) increased in the case of foreign cotton twist and yarn by 10 per cent. (160,000 maunds as against 145,000 maunds), and foreign cotton piece-goods by 7 per cent. (Rs. 11,60,33,000 as against Rs. 10,86,91,000).

The statistics for April to October 1915, as also for the corresponding months of 1914, are summarised below :—

* New gauge fixed at Rajmahal from 1st June 1910 in place of the gauge at Sahebganj. The zero of gauge at Rajmahal is 56·46 feet above M. S.-L. up to 26th October 1915 and 60·00 feet above M. S.-L. from 27th October 1915.

† To compare the reduced levels shown in these monthly printed statements before and after the 1st June 1903, 5·76 feet should be deducted from the former or added to the latter (vide Bengal Government letter No. 1033T.—1., dated the 12th October 1909).

(a) A temporary gauge has been fixed and the readings below zero are being observed from the 7th March 1913.

(b) From the 13th November 1915 the zero of gauge is 2·43 ft. above M. S.-L. Previous to that the zero was at mean sea-level dating back to 15th July 1897. In the highest reading as given in the monthly statements up to and including October 1915 the zero of gauge has been taken as 4·30.

(c) From the 25th January 1916 the zero of gauge at Berhampur is 30·99 ft. above M. S. L.

The total approximate earnings for the current half-year up to the end of February amount to Rs. 52,516, which is about Rs. 4,000 less than at the end of January owing mainly to the decrease in rice and grain traffic possibly due to the troops at the depôts near Darjeeling having been fewer than usual.

The traffic is, however, now improving and there is reason to believe that the total gross earnings of the half-year will reach Rs. 5,70,000, that is, about Rs. 65,000 better than the corresponding period of last year.

In the notes on the last approximate return for January 1916 it was anticipated that the gross earnings for the half-year would reach Rs. 90,000. Judging from the present improvement specially in the export traffic in grain, it is more than likely that the total for this half-year will reach Rs. 1,00,000 which will be at the rate of Rs. 35 per mile per week.

The estimated gross earnings of the half-year of Rs. 55,000 as anticipated in the note on the approximate return at the end of January, are expected to be reached, as the wool traffic still continues and other merchandise is being regularly carried.

The above figure gives a return of Rs. 87 per mile per week.
